CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

1.1 In its Order dated February 3, 2023, the Court invited, inter alia, Member States of the United Nations to submit written statements on the questions referred to the Court by the U.N. General Assembly in its resolution 77/247 of December 30, 2022. The United States appreciates the opportunity to submit this Statement presenting its observations on those questions to assist the Court's consideration of the General Assembly's request.

1.2 The United States has supported the pursuit of a final negotiated settlement to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict for decades, serving as a participant, facilitator, or witness of initiatives that include most prominently the Madrid Conference of 1991; the Oslo Accords; the Middle East Quartet; and the 2000 Camp David Summit, the 2007 Annapolis Conference, and other U.S.-sponsored direct negotiations, most recently in 2013-2014. This year at Aqaba, Jordan and Sharm El Sheikh, Egypt, the United States participated in discussions held in a format intended to foster de-escalation and enhance direct dialogue between Israeli and Palestinian officials. Informed by this unique role, the United States voted against resolution 77/247 out of concern that the referral risks driving the parties to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict further away from the objective of a negotiated two-State solution – an objective enshrined in numerous UN Security Council and General Assembly resolutions, as well as in the aforementioned initiatives and the agreements between the parties.¹

1.3 The United States is deeply concerned over the deterioration in trust between the parties in recent years and the periods of increased violence. In February 2023, the Security Council issued a Presidential Statement, joined by the United States, expressing strong opposition to unilateral measures by either side that impede peace, calling on all parties to observe calm and restraint, and to refrain from provocative actions, incitement and inflammatory rhetoric, with the aim, inter alia, of de-escalating the situation on the ground, rebuilding trust and confidence, demonstrating through policies and actions a genuine commitment to the two-State solution, and creating the conditions necessary for promoting peace.²

Events in the ensuing months have only highlighted the importance of that focus on de-escalation as a necessary first step.

1.4 As this Court has recognized, the tragic situation in the Middle East “can be brought to an end only through implementation in good faith of all relevant Security Council resolutions, in particular resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973).”³ Since resolution 242 was adopted in 1967, the foundation for negotiation to achieve a comprehensive, just and durable end to the conflict has been the principle of “land for peace.”⁴ This foundational precept recognizes that achieving peace and security in the region is contingent on two interdependent elements: both the withdrawal of forces from occupied territory and the end to conflict and respect and acknowledgement of the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of every State in the area, and the right of each State to live in peace within secure and recognized borders. Neither element is alone sufficient to establish a comprehensive, just and lasting peace; neither can be achieved without the other. It is on this organizational “land for peace” basis, reaffirmed in Security Council resolution 338,⁵ that the pursuit of a negotiated peace has rested for the last half century. During this time, it has been the basis for historic agreements that include the Egypt-Israel Treaty of Peace, the Israel-Jordan Treaty of Peace, and the Oslo Accords in which the Israelis and Palestinians notably committed themselves, inter alia, to negotiating resolution of the conflict between them, and to creating the first interim Palestinian self-governance authority. It remains true to this day that only through such negotiations can the comprehensive, just and lasting peace first envisioned by the United Nations be established, one in which two States exist side-by-side and Israelis and Palestinians enjoy equal measures of freedom, security, and prosperity.

1.5 While there is reason at this time for concern that the conditions necessary for peace, or the negotiations to achieve it, are not present, the United States remains committed to preserving that pathway for Israelis and Palestinians. As such, the United States' immediate focus is de-escalation, the resumption of productive contacts between Israeli and Palestinian officials, and avoiding the risk of foreclosing a negotiated two-State solution based upon and consistent with the framework first created in the Security Council resolutions mentioned above and continually endorsed in both Security Council and General Assembly resolutions.⁶ The United States continues to engage in efforts to create more propitious conditions for a negotiated solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and urges other members of the international community to redouble efforts to do the same. These efforts include the recent Aqaba and Sharm El Sheikh meetings, involving the United States joining with Egyptian, Jordanian, Israeli, and Palestinian representatives to foster efforts to de-escalate tensions, discourage unilateral actions that take the parties further from peace, and reinforce the parties' commitment to their prior agreements.⁷

1.6 The United States submits that it is through such efforts that the conditions can be established to achieve a negotiated two-State solution that leads to peace and security for both sides, and to the full realization of Palestinian self-determination. As discussed below, the referral resolution itself recognizes the need to advance meaningful negotiations aimed at achieving a peace agreement to this end. The Security Council and General Assembly, in accordance with their respective functions under the U.N. Charter, have played longstanding roles advocating that this conflict be addressed through a negotiating framework. Accordingly, the questions referred should be understood as a request for advice aimed at facilitating the General Assembly's proper role and function within the United Nations for promoting a negotiated resolution to the conflict. It is essential that the Court's opinion advance that objective.

1.7 This Statement begins in Chapter II by describing the framework initially set forth by Security Council resolutions 242 and 338, endorsed by the General Assembly, recognized by the Court in Construction of a Wall, and adopted by the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization (“PLO”) in their own agreements as a basis for a negotiated settlement to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

1.8 Drawing from principles the Court has recognized as fundamental to the integrity of its advisory function and its role as a principal organ of the United Nations, Chapter III then identifies compelling reasons for the Court to exercise its discretion to address the referral questions within that established negotiating framework. The fact that the questions referred invite the Court to opine on matters at the heart of the conflict, address alleged actions of only one party and assert conclusions of international law, and were inserted into resolution 77/247 at a very late stage with minimal consultation among UN Member States further warrants such an approach.

1.9 Next, Chapter IV identifies assumptions in the second referred question that disregard settled principles of international law. To the extent the second referred question could be construed as asking the Court to declare that the Israeli occupation has been rendered unlawful or void, the Court should decline that invitation on the basis that such an assessment is not supported by international law.

1.10 Finally, Chapter V concludes the Statement by respectfully requesting that the Court proceed with caution, not disturb the fundamental “land for peace” principle underlying the established framework for Israeli-Palestinian peace and security, and consider in its advice how best to advance the objective of facilitating the General Assembly’s proper role and function in promoting a negotiated resolution to the conflict.

CHAPTER II

THE FRAMEWORK FOR A NEGOTIATED SOLUTION TO RESOLVE THE ISRAELI-PALESTINIAN CONFLICT

2.1 Throughout the tumultuous and often violent history of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, the United Nations has been consistent in its support for the proposition that a comprehensive, just and lasting peace must be the result of direct negotiations between the parties to the conflict, not one imposed from outside or by one party. This principle is at the center of Security Council resolutions 242 and 338 and has been reiterated in resolutions of the Security Council and General Assembly ever since, including the resolution referring the questions at issue in this proceeding. Likewise, the Israelis and Palestinians themselves adopted this principle in entering into the Declaration of Principles and other agreements known collectively as the “Oslo Accords” in the 1990s. Of particular note, the parties specifically articulated their agreement to negotiate the “permanent status issues” central to resolving their dispute, including Jerusalem, settlements, security arrangements, borders, and other issues.⁸ Despite tragic periods of violence, unilateral actions by both sides, and allegations by each side of the other failing to adhere to its commitments, neither the parties, nor the General Assembly, nor the Security Council have abandoned the central precept that direct negotiation on the basis of “land for peace” is the path to comprehensive, just and lasting peace and security.

2.2 The United States respectfully submits that the Court’s consideration of the questions presented by the General Assembly needs to take place within this context. To aid the Court’s consideration, this Chapter describes the context of the negotiating framework through which the referred questions should be understood. Section A describes the negotiating framework itself, which has its roots in Security Council resolutions 242 and 338 and was further defined and memorialized in the bilateral agreements between the Israelis and Palestinians. Section B demonstrates the continuing commitment of the United Nations to this same negotiating framework. Section C describes the parties’ efforts within this negotiating framework in recent years. Finally, Section D, describes the process by which the referral resolution in this proceeding was adopted and how it too endorses the established negotiating framework.

⁸ Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements, pmbl., art.1, U.N. Doc. A/48/486-S/26560 (Sept. 13, 1993) [Dossier No. 1302] (US Annex 4); see also infra Chapter II.A, C.

A. The Development of the Established Framework for Negotiations

2.3 The established framework for a negotiated resolution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict was developed over a series of decades, beginning with Security Council resolutions adopted in response to the Arab-Israeli wars of 1967 and 1973, then further defined and adopted by the Israelis and Palestinians in their own agreements with each other, particularly the Oslo Accords. Over this period, the core precept has been that negotiation on the basis of the “land for peace” principle is the path to achieving comprehensive, just and lasting peace and security in the Middle East.

2.4 The foundation for this framework is set forth in Security Council resolution 242 (1967). In this resolution, the Security Council

Affirm[ed] that . . . the establishment of a just and lasting peace in the Middle East . . . should include the application of both the following principles:

- (i) Withdrawal of Israeli armed forces from territories occupied in the recent conflict; [and]
- (ii) Termination of all claims or states of belligerency and respect for and acknowledgement of the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of every State in the area and their right to live in peace within secure and recognized boundaries free from threats or acts of force.⁹

It is these interdependent elements that define the concept of “land for peace.” In this resolution the Security Council went on to request designation of a Special Representative to “promote agreement” and to “assist efforts to achieve a peaceful and accepted settlement in accordance with the provisions and principles” of the resolution.¹⁰

2.5 Then in resolution 338 (1973), the Security Council reiterated its call for implementation of these provisions and further called for the immediate commencement of negotiations “aimed at establishing a just and durable peace in the Middle East.”¹¹

¹¹ S.C. Res. 338, ¶¶ 2-3, U.N. Doc. S/RES/338 (Oct. 22, 1973) (US Annex 2). More specifically, the Security Council

- 2. Call[ed] upon the parties concerned to start immediately after the cease-fire the implementation of Security Council resolution 242 (1967) in all of its parts; [and]
- 3. Decide[d] that, immediately and concurrently with the cease-fire, negotiations shall start between the parties concerned under appropriate auspices aimed at establishing a just and durable peace in the Middle East.

2.6 These resolutions have served as the cornerstone upon which the pursuit of a comprehensive negotiated peace between Israel and its neighboring States, and Israel and the Palestinians, has rested. Israel and Egypt relied on the principle of “land for peace” in concluding their 1979 Treaty of Peace, as did Jordan and Israel in coming to their own peace agreement in 1994.¹² In 1991, at the Middle East Peace Conference in Madrid, convened by the United States and the Soviet Union, Israelis, Jordanians, Lebanese, Syrians, and notably Palestinians joined together for the first time, along with others, with the common objective of pursuing comprehensive peace through direct negotiations on the basis of this same paradigm.¹³

2.7 Then in 1993 the Oslo Accords extended these successes. The PLO recognized the State of Israel, and the Israelis recognized the PLO as the representative of the Palestinian people.¹⁴ They then further committed themselves, in the first of the Oslo Accords, the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements (“Declaration of Principles”) signed in Washington D.C., to achieving a “just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement” through the agreed political process, to recognizing “their mutual legitimate and political rights,” to negotiations to establish a Palestinian Interim Self-Government Authority for the Palestinian people in the West Bank and Gaza Strip for a transitional period, and to negotiations on permanent status that would be based on and lead to implementation of Security Council resolutions 242 and 338.¹⁵ That is, they adopted in their agreements with each other the “land for peace” negotiating paradigm first articulated in those resolutions.

2.8 More specifically, the Declaration of Principles set out a framework for Israeli-Palestinian negotiations and began the process of building Palestinian self-governance institutions. It confirmed that the parties’ mutual objective was to find a negotiated solution to permanent status issues between them that “will lead to the implementation of Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973).”¹⁶ It identified that these “permanent status” negotiations are intended to encompass issues including: Jerusalem, refugees, settlements, security arrangements, borders, relations and cooperation with other neighbors, and other issues of common interest.¹⁷ And, it described a procedure for Palestinian elections “as a significant interim preparatory step towards the realization of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people and their just requirements,” while setting out the beginnings of the framework for how powers and responsibilities would be allocated in the transitional period between the interim Palestinian governance and the Israeli military government and Civil Administration.¹⁸

2.9 In the second of the Oslo Accords, the 1995 Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and Gaza Strip (the “Interim Agreement”), the parties reaffirmed “that the negotiations on the permanent status . . . will lead to the implementation of Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338.”¹⁹

2.10 The Interim Agreement sets out detailed agreements reached between the parties on the allocation of responsibilities and jurisdiction in the West Bank and Gaza pending a negotiated solution, establishing, for example, different jurisdictional arrangements between the Israeli military government and its Civil Administration and the Palestinian interim entity (now referred to as the Palestinian Authority) with respect to Areas A, B and C of the West Bank, as well as allocating responsibilities for security between them.²⁰ And, as described in section C below, while the vision in the Oslo Accords that a final negotiation would be concluded within a definite time period was not achieved, the Oslo Accords continue to serve as the frame of reference for the interim allocation of authorities between Israel and the Palestinian Authority and to inform Israeli-Palestinian relations and negotiations. This has remained true even in times of great stress.

B. The United Nations Has Not Wavered in Its Support for Resolution of the Conflict on the Basis of the Longstanding Negotiating Framework

2.11 Even when conditions for negotiation on permanent status issues have been challenged by periods of violence, unilateral actions, and distrust, the United Nations has continued its unwavering support for the established framework as the basis upon which to achieve a two-

State solution and bring the dispute to an end. In 2008, expressing its support for direct negotiations at the Annapolis Conference, the Security Council noted in its resolution 1850 (2008) the “irreversibility of the bilateral negotiations” and that it “supports the parties’ agreed principles for the bilateral negotiating process and their determined efforts to reach their goal of concluding a peace treaty resolving all outstanding issues.”²¹ Again in 2016, the Security Council urged the intensification and acceleration of international and regional diplomatic efforts and support aimed at achieving, without delay a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East on the basis of the relevant United Nations resolutions, the Madrid terms of reference, including the principle of land for peace, the Arab Peace Initiative and the Quartet Roadmap and an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967.²²

The Council also “[c]onfirm[ed] its determination to support the parties throughout the negotiations and in the implementation of an agreement.”²³

2.12 Just this year, the Security Council issued a Presidential Statement reiterating that:

The Security Council reaffirms its unwavering commitment to the vision of the two-State solution where two democratic States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side in peace within secure and recognized borders, consistent with international law and relevant UN resolutions.²⁴

2.13 And the General Assembly, the body seeking the Court’s advice, has likewise continued to consistently and robustly underscore the need for the parties to comply with their agreements with each other and to negotiate a final resolution to the conflict on the basis of the established framework, including the principle of “land for peace.”²⁵

Res. 77/30, Assistance to the Palestinian people, U.N. Doc. A/RES/77/30 (Dec. 8, 2022).

2.14 Indeed, in the weeks prior to the referral resolution, the General Assembly, in its recurring resolution entitled “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine,” urged renewed and coordinated efforts by the international community aimed at restoring a political horizon and advancing and accelerating the conclusion of a peace treaty to achieve without delay an end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 by resolving all outstanding issues, including all final status issues, without exception, for a just, lasting and peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, in accordance with the internationally recognized basis of the two-State solution, and of the Arab-Israeli conflict, for the realization of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East.²⁶

2.15 In that resolution, specifically on resolving the conflict, the General Assembly went on to reiterate its call for a comprehensive peace “on the basis of the relevant United Nations resolutions . . . the Madrid terms of reference, including the principle of land for peace . . . and reaffirm[ed] . . . its unwavering support . . . for the two-State solution of Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security.”²⁷

2.16 As further discussed in Section D, in the very resolution placing these questions before the Court, the General Assembly once again took the opportunity to reiterate its support for a solution to the conflict, leading to two States living side by side in peace and security, on the basis of the longstanding negotiating framework.

C. The Parties Have Maintained This Negotiating Framework

2.17 With the support of the United Nations and the facilitation of the United States and others, since the Oslo Accords the parties have repeatedly come to the bargaining table to negotiate their future and they have recognized the continuing need for direct negotiations on the basis of the established framework.²⁸ Notwithstanding a lack of progress in recent years, the parties have reaffirmed their commitment to their prior agreements adopting the “land for peace” negotiating framework. For example, on December 20, 2019, the Israeli Attorney General published a memorandum in relation to the question of the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court (“ICC”) in the “Situation in the State of Palestine,” asserting that

UN Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973) . . . form the terms of reference for Israeli-Palestinian negotiations (because they have been accepted as such by the parties) [and] Israel also considers that the tragedy of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict can only be resolved by direct dialogue between the parties that is sensitive to the needs and aspirations of Israelis and Palestinians alike.²⁹

2.18 In their 2020 submissions to the ICC’s Pre-Trial Chamber, the Palestinians likewise identified a continued commitment to the Oslo Accords and the established negotiating framework, submitting a statement that reaffirm[ed] our commitment to a solution to the Palestinian-Israeli conflict based on the two-state solution . . . through negotiations held under international auspices (the International Quartet plus) and through an international peace conference, on the basis of the UN resolutions and international law.³⁰ their commitment to all previous agreements between them, and to work towards a just and lasting peace.”³¹

2.20 The next month, in March 2023, they, alongside the United States and others, met in Sharm El Sheikh, Egypt, further articulating in a Joint Communique their unwavering commitment to all previous agreements between them.³² The parties reiterated “their agreement to address all outstanding issues through direct dialogue.”³³ Most importantly, the parties affirmed their commitment to creating the conditions for resolving the conflict through direct negotiations, stating they are looking forward to cooperating with a view to consolidating the basis for direct negotiations between the Palestinians and the Israelis, towards achieving comprehensive, just and lasting peace, and promote cooperation and coexistence between all people of the Middle East.³⁴

2.21 As such, the Israeli and Palestinian sides, as recently as this year and notwithstanding the current levels of violence and mistrust, have acknowledged the continued relevance of their prior agreements. The parties have also continued to maintain contacts that reinforce the principles to which they agreed.³⁵ These agreements and efforts are founded on the “land for peace” principle for negotiations to achieve a comprehensive, just and lasting peace, first articulated, and continually supported, by the United Nations.

2.22 Against this backdrop, on December 30, 2022, the General Assembly adopted resolution 77/247 by an affirmative vote of only eighty-seven of its Member States.³⁶ Though the resolution is otherwise largely identical to the most recent in a long line of General Assembly resolutions with the same title, it lost the support of sixty Member States from its prior iteration, resolution 75/98 (2020),³⁷ when its text was amended to include a request for an advisory opinion from this Court on two questions:

- (a) What are the legal consequences arising from the ongoing violation by Israel of the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, from its prolonged occupation, settlement and annexation of the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including measures aimed at altering the demographic composition, character and status of the Holy City of Jerusalem, and from its adoption of related discriminatory legislation and measures?
- (b) How do the policies and practices of Israel referred to . . . above affect the legal status of the occupation, and what are the legal consequences that arise for all States and the United Nations from this status?³⁸

2.23 As discussed in Chapter III, Member States voiced concern that this referral would damage the prospect of Israeli-Palestinian negotiations in the future – a result dissonant with the General Assembly's consistent and continued support for a resolution of the dispute through negotiations.

2.24 Resolution 77/247 itself reiterates the fundamental proposition that negotiation to resolve the permanent status issues, through the established framework, is the only path to resolving the conflict. It notes the urgent need to restore a political horizon for advancing and accelerating meaningful negotiations aimed at the achievement of a peace agreement that will bring a complete end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 and the resolution of all core final status issues, without exception, leading to a peaceful, just, lasting and comprehensive solution to the question of Palestine,³⁹

2.25 It likewise stresses

the need for full compliance with the Israeli-Palestinian agreements reached within the context of the Middle East peace process, including Sharm el-Sheikh understandings, and the implementation of the Quartet roadmap to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,⁴⁰

2.26 Further, the provisions of the referral specify that the Court should render its advisory opinion in consideration of the relevant resolutions of the Security Council and General Assembly, and the Court’s opinion in Construction of a Wall, all of which affirm the established negotiating framework.⁴¹

2.27 Thus, the referral resolution invokes and endorses this framework for a negotiated peace, including achievement of a permanent two-State solution, and the questions referred need to be considered within this context. The Court’s deliberations should also be informed by the long-standing and ongoing view of the General Assembly and the Security Council, which the parties have relied on in their dialogue: that only through negotiations can the conflict be resolved comprehensively, including all permanent status issues such as borders and security arrangements.

⁴¹ The referral resolution also asks the Court to give due consideration to relevant resolutions of the Human Rights Council (“HRC”). The HRC, a subsidiary organ of the General Assembly comprised of 47 UN Member States, has an important mandate for the promotion and protection of human rights around the world. It is, however, the General Assembly and Security Council that have the overall responsibility within the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security. Moreover, the Human Rights Council likewise, including resolution on the “Right of the Palestinian people to self-determination,” has “reaffirm[ed] the need to achieve a just, comprehensive, and lasting solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict in conformity with international law and other internationally agreed parameters, including all relevant United Nations resolutions.” See, e.g., Human Rights Council Res. 49/28, ¶ 2, U.N. Doc. A/HRC/RES/49/28 (Apr. 1, 2022) [Dossier No. 1589] (emphasis added).

CHAPTER III

COMPELLING REASONS SUPPORT THE COURT ADDRESSING THE REFERRAL QUESTIONS WITHIN THE ESTABLISHED FRAMEWORK

3.1 The United States submits that there are compelling reasons for the Court to address the questions referred by the General Assembly within the established framework for the parties to negotiate a resolution to the permanent status issues at the heart of their dispute such as borders and security arrangements. These reasons stem from two interrelated considerations: first, the important role the United Nations continues to play in efforts to resolve the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, including through the numerous Security Council and General Assembly resolutions calling for a negotiated settlement; and second, the degree to which the questions referred engage the principle of consent to judicial settlement in a dispute concerning territory and for which there is an established framework for addressing disputed issues through a negotiating process. That the questions are framed to encompass and draw legal conclusions about the acts of only one party to the dispute also suggests that caution is warranted.

3.2 It is well established that the Court has “the duty to satisfy itself, each time it is seized of a request for an opinion, as to the propriety of the exercise of its judicial function.”⁴² Both the Court and its predecessor, the Permanent Court of International Justice, have recognized inherent limitations to advisory jurisdiction stemming from the Court’s judicial character.⁴³ Those considerations, which the Court has said may lead it to decline to issue an opinion, have also informed whether the Court addresses the questions posed in their entirety or limits the scope of its response.⁴⁴ The Court has also acknowledged the need for it to consider the “origin

⁴³ See Western Sahara, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 1975, p. 12, ¶ 23; Interpretation of Peace Treaties, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 1950, pp. 65, 71; Status of Eastern Carelia, Advisory Opinion, 1923, P.C.I.J., Series B, No. 5, p. 29. The Court has explained, for example, that there would be “compelling reasons” to decline to give an advisory opinion where it “would have the effect of circumventing the principle that a State is not obliged to allow its disputes to be submitted to judicial settlement without its consent.” Western Sahara, Advisory Opinion, 1975 I.C.J. at 25, ¶ 33; see also infra note 66.

⁴⁴ In responding to the request for advice, the Court retains discretion to broaden, interpret, or reformulate the question(s) posed, including to identify the applicable and existing principles and rules. Kosovo, Advisory Opinion, 2010 I.C.J. at 423, ¶ 50 (noting that the Court may reframe the scope and meaning of the questions and scope of the dispute” in evaluating the propriety of exercising its advisory jurisdiction, in particular with respect to confirming that the Court’s opinion would assist the General Assembly in “the proper exercise of its function.”⁴⁵ To remain faithful to its judicial character, the Court has determined that it must first ascertain the meaning and full implications of the question in the light of the actual framework of fact and law in which it falls for consideration.⁴⁶

3.3 This Chapter discusses how these important considerations identified by the Court should lead it to address the referral request in a manner that respects the established framework discussed in Chapter II.

3.4 Section A explains why, in the present case, the Court should follow the approach it took to the General Assembly’s previous request for advice relating to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict in Construction of a Wall to avoid disturbing the established negotiating framework. Section B then details how the questions referred in this proceeding implicate the principle of consent to judicial settlement to a far greater extent than in Construction of a Wall, by inviting the Court to address issues that form the very subject matter of the dispute and address matters the Security Council and General Assembly have repeatedly recognized must be resolved through direct negotiations between the parties.

presented by the referral resolution where: (1) the question was not adequately formulated, (2) the Court determined on the basis of its examination of the background to the request that the request did not reflect the “legal questions really in issue,” or (3) the question asked was unclear or vague). The Court has repeatedly exercised this discretion when called upon by the facts of a case, or the substance or text of a referral resolution. See, e.g., Application for Review of Judgement No. 273 of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal, Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 1982, p. 348, ¶ 46 (Court clarifying vague or ambiguous referral question); Interpretation of the Agreement of 25 March 1951 between the WHO and Egypt [hereinafter 1951 Agreement], Advisory Opinion, I.C.J. Reports 1980, pp. 87-89, ¶¶ 34-36 (referral question did not correspond to the “true legal question” under consideration); Interpretation of the Greco-Turkish Agreement of 1 December 1926 (Final Protocol, Article IV), Advisory Opinion, 1928, P.C.I.J., Series B, No. 16 (I), pp. 14-16 (referral question did not accurately state the question on which the Court’s opinion was being sought); see also Chagos, Advisory Opinion, Dissenting Opinion of Judge Donoghue, 2019 I.C.J. at 266, ¶ 22 (“The Court could have chosen, in the exercise of its discretion, to provide a more limited response to the Request (possibly reformulating the Request in order to do so). Such a response would have provided legal guidance to the General Assembly without undermining the integrity of the Court’s judicial function.”).

A. The Court’s Respect for the Role of the Security Council and General Assembly in Resolving the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict and the Established Negotiating Framework in Construction of a Wall Remains Appropriate

3.5 The relationship between the Court and the other principal organs of the United Nations has been described as one of “coordination and functional cooperation in the attainment of the common goals of the Organization.”⁴⁷ In this regard, in exercising both its contentious and advisory jurisdiction, the Court has been mindful of the respective competencies of the principal political organs in matters of international peace and security.⁴⁸ As Judge Azevedo stated in Interpretation of Peace Treaties:

[T]he Court, which has been raised to the status of a principal organ, and thus more closely geared into the mechanism of the [United Nations Organization], must do its utmost to co-operate with the other organs with a view to attaining the aims and principles that have been set forth.⁴⁹

3.6 In exercising its advisory jurisdiction, the Court has appropriately recognized that its function is to assist the relevant UN organs in carrying out their tasks,⁵⁰ while respecting the responsibilities and decisions of the Security Council and General Assembly in matters of peace and security and taking care to avoid a result that could undermine or render those decisions inconsequential.⁵¹ It follows that in addressing the questions referred in resolution

. . . in general it cannot be doubted that the mutual relations of the principal organs should be based upon a general theory of co-operation between them in the pursuit of the aims of the Organization (subject to the primary responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security).

This approach opens the way to a functional conception of the task of the Court in its capacity of a principal organ of the United Nations. According to this, subject to overriding considerations of law (including judicial propriety), the Court, in exercising its judicial function or decision a dispute (Statute, Article 38, paragraph 1) or rendering an advisory opinion (Charter, Article 96 and Statute, Article 65, paragraph 1) must co-operate in the attainment of the aims of the Organization and strive to give effect to the decisions of other principal organs, and not achieve results which would render them inconsequential.

3.7 In Construction of a Wall, the Court considered the propriety of advising the General Assembly on aspects of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict arising out of a discrete act, Israel's construction of a separation barrier. The Court was careful to note that the question asked by the General Assembly was "confined to the legal consequences of the construction of the wall,"⁵² and the Court took care not to undermine the established negotiating framework created and supported by Security Council and General Assembly resolutions. The Court avoided rendering an opinion that would have appeared to dictate the outcome of the final status issues that the parties agreed to negotiate, examining only "other issues to the extent that they might be necessary for its consideration of the question put to it," and noting that the broader conflict "can be brought to an end only through implementation in good faith of all relevant Security Council resolutions, in particular resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973)."⁵³

3.8 In those proceedings, the Court carefully considered the role of the United Nations in addressing the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. In particular, it considered whether the referral question was properly before it in light of Security Council resolution 1515 (2003), a then recently passed resolution endorsing a specific plan for achieving a negotiated resolution to the conflict based on the established negotiating framework. It cited the responsibilities of the United Nations in questions relating to international peace and security, and explained that, "[w]ithin the institutional framework of the Organization, this responsibility has been manifested by the adoption of many Security Council and General Assembly resolutions"⁵⁴ related to the conflict.

Reports 1984, pp. 392, 434, ¶ 95) (stating that the Court's reference in Military and Paramilitary Activities to "complementary functions should not be overlooked" and discussing how the functions of the political and judicial principal organs may address different aspects of the same matter "[b]ut these functions may be correlated with each other. What would be required between the two is co-ordination and co-operation, not competition or mutual exclusion."); see also 1 SHAW, supra note 49 at 111; Gowlland-Debbas & Forteau, supra note 47, at 147.

3.9 The Court specifically recognized that “[t]he ‘Roadmap’ approved by Security Council resolution 1515 (2003) represent[ed] the most recent of efforts to initiate negotiations to this end,”⁵⁵ and drew to the General Assembly’s attention the need for these efforts to be encouraged with a view to achieving as soon as possible, on the basis of international law, a negotiated solution to the outstanding problems and the establishment of a Palestinian State, existing side by side with Israel and its other neighbours, with peace and security for all in the region.⁵⁶

3.10 This recognition of the responsibilities of these other principal organs of the United Nations concerning the conflict is consistent with the Court’s identification in other contexts of the need for caution in dealing with questions related to the particular areas of competence of the different bodies within the United Nations.⁵⁷ The case for such an approach is even more compelling with respect to the questions now before the Court.

3.11 In Construction of a Wall, the Court recognized that it was through Security Council and General Assembly resolutions that the United Nations has defined its interest in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Those same resolutions, many of which to this day continue to be adopted annually or biannually by the General Assembly – including the very resolution requesting this advisory opinion, time and again endorse the proposition that this dispute can only be resolved through negotiation on the basis of the principle of “land for peace” first established in Security Council resolutions 242 and 338, and within the established framework. They emphasize “the need for full compliance with” the established framework for the parties to the conflict to

⁵⁶ Id. at 200-01, ¶ 162; see also id. ¶ 161 (taking the opportunity to “emphasize the urgent necessity for the United Nations as a whole to redouble its efforts to bring the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which continues to pose a threat to international peace and security, to a speedy conclusion, thereby establishing a just and lasting peace in the region.”).

⁵⁷ “In assessing the propriety of rendering an advisory opinion in any given case, consideration must be given to the particular responsibilities accorded to the Court within the architecture of the United Nations Charter.” Kosovo, Advisory Opinion, Separate Opinion of Judge Sepulveda-Amor, 2010 I.C.J. at 492-93, ¶¶ 8-9 (Court’s own responsibilities on maintenance of international peace and security guides it in how to apply resolutions); see also Kosovo, Advisory Opinion, Dissenting Opinion of Judge Skotnikov, 2010 I.C.J. at 517-18, ¶ 8 (quoting Jaworzina, Advisory Opinion, 1923, P.C.I.J., Series B, No. 8, p. 37 (“It is an established principle that the right to giving an authoritative interpretation of a legal rule belongs solely to the person or body who has power to modify or suppress it”)); *Questions of Interpretation and Application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the Aerial Incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. resolve their disputes.⁵⁸ The shaping and continuing support in these resolutions of the established framework as the means to resolve permanent status issues, including borders and security arrangements, are critical not only for identifying the United Nations' interest in this matter, but also for understanding the referral itself and the appropriate scope for the Court's consideration.⁵⁹

3.12 The Court in Construction of a Wall ultimately concluded that it was unclear what influence the Court's opinion in that proceeding might have on negotiations, including those called for under Security Council resolution 1515, and accordingly did not regard negotiations as a compelling reason to decline to exercise its jurisdiction.⁶⁰ The same is far from true here, where the referral questions posed are fundamentally different in nature and scope. In contrast to the narrow question confronting the Court in Construction of a Wall, the questions presented in these proceedings have potentially far-reaching implications for issues at the very center of negotiations. Some championing the referral have gone so far as to state that before the Court is “the entire question of Palestine” – effectively suggesting the Court opine definitively on all aspects of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.⁶¹

3.13 There is no denying that the questions here could invite sweeping advice, absent careful consideration and respect for the framework endorsed by the Security Council and General Assembly and adopted by the parties to the dispute. The first question asks the Court about the legal consequences from three broad categories of alleged acts: (1) “violation by Israel of the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination”; (2) Israel’s “prolonged occupation, settlement and annexation of the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967”; and (3) “related discriminatory legislation and measures.” The second question asks the Court to weigh in on the “legal status” of the Israeli occupation, in toto, including with respect to the legal consequences for the United Nations and States. Collectively, these questions – with their conclusory and one-sided framing – could easily be construed as seeking an opinion on the very issues the General Assembly and Security Council have continually reinforced must be resolved through direct negotiations between the parties.

3.14 But again, General Assembly resolution 77/247 reaffirms “the need for full compliance with” the established framework for the parties to the conflict to resolve their dispute. The referral therefore places the Court in the unenviable position of having to consider how to address the potentially far-reaching questions without disturbing the established negotiating framework the General Assembly itself invoked in seeking this advisory opinion.

3.15 That the referral questions themselves may suggest the Court is invited to consider advising beyond this framework was cause for concern even as the General Assembly considered them. As noted in Chapter II, sixty fewer UN Member States voted in favor of resolution 77/247 as compared to its previous iteration without the referral, resolution 75/98.⁶² In the Fourth Committee and at the General Assembly plenary, States expressed concerns that the request for an advisory opinion would not facilitate, but rather would impede, resolution of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and would not serve the aim of bringing the parties back to dialogue.⁶³ Some noted that there was insufficient notice that the advisory opinion request had been added to the resolution and that there was inadequate consultation and discussion.⁶⁴ The United States thus is but one of a number of Member States that expressed reservations with the referral aspect of the resolution and, particularly, its potential negative impact on the prospect of Israeli-Palestinian negotiations in the future.

Mtg. of the UNGA Fourth Committee (Nov. 11, 2022), available at <https://journal.un.org/en/new-york/meeting/officials/f7d34375-ae42-43fa-cd84-08da63695862/2022-11-11/statementsid> (last visited July 17, 2023) (emphasizing that “requests for advisory opinions from the ICJ should be thoroughly discussed and consulted with the UN membership”); Ambassador Mills, supra note 1. Even States that voted in favor of the resolution noted the decision to seek an advisory opinion was not thoroughly considered. See, e.g., U.N. GAOR, 77th Sess., 56th plen. Mtg., at 3-5, U.N. Doc. A/77/PV.56 (Resumption 1) (Dec. 30, 2022) (statement of Malta emphasizing that the request for an advisory opinion “would have benefited from further discussion and consultations with the wider United Nations Membership;” and statement of Portugal noting “reasonable procedural doubts” about the paragraph seeking an advisory opinion and that “there should have been more in-depth consultations.”).

3.16 The Court’s approach to the question in Construction of a Wall is instructive for informing the Court in its approach to the questions referred by resolution 77/247.⁶⁵ The Court there addressed whether certain violations of international law had occurred and the legal consequences of such violations, such as that Israel was under an obligation to end the conduct giving rise to identified violations. In doing so, however, the Court navigated a course that did not prejudge or interfere with the existing framework for negotiations and its “land for peace” principle. The Court here should again give special consideration to the functions of the Security Council and the General Assembly in addressing the conflict and take care to calibrate its advice to preserve the established framework and avoid prejudicing the ability of the parties to negotiate within it matters at the heart of the dispute, such as borders and security arrangements.

3.17 If the Court strays from this approach, there is substantial risk that, rather than facilitating the work of the United Nations to return the parties to negotiations and full respect for the established framework, the Court’s advice could prejudge or inadvertently suggest to the parties that there is no utility to negotiations on the interdependent elements of the land for peace principle that the Security Council and General Assembly have so long endorsed and encouraged. Such an opinion would be contrary to, rather than considerate of, relevant UN resolutions and the work of the Security Council and the General Assembly, and thus would not assist the General Assembly in the proper exercise of its functions.

B. Going Beyond the Established Negotiating Framework Would Risk Impinging Upon the Principle of Consent

3.18 The Court has long maintained that there would be “compelling reasons” to decline to give an advisory opinion where it “would have the effect of circumventing the principle that a State is not obliged to allow its disputes to be submitted to judicial settlement without its consent.”⁶⁶ In Construction of a Wall, the Court rejected the contention that its opinion on the narrower question in that proceeding would have that effect. The Court supported this position by pointing to the responsibilities of the United Nations in questions relating to international peace and security, a responsibility that “has been manifested by the adoption of many Security Council and General Assembly resolutions” related to Middle East Peace.⁶⁷

3.19 Here in contrast, the referral questions are framed to implicate a wide range of issues that go to the disputes at the heart of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, including the status of the territory in question.⁶⁸ Yet not only has there been no consent to judicial settlement of these matters by the Court, but also the referral questions invite the Court to opine on the alleged actions of only one party to the dispute, without also opining on the acts or omissions of the Palestinian Authority, Palestine Liberation Organization or other entities.⁶⁹ Moreover, as stated already, both the Security Council and General Assembly have continued to maintain that, for there to be an enduring peace, the permanent status issues encompassed in the dispute must be resolved through direct negotiations.

3.20 As discussed above, the Court found in Construction of a Wall that the effect of its opinion on the negotiating framework was too unclear to regard as a compelling factor in considering the discretion and propriety aspects of its advisory jurisdiction. Such a finding is not plausible here where the questions presented invite an opinion that is substantially equivalent to adjudicating on the very subject matter of those negotiations. An opinion by the Court that would seemingly or effectively resolve a permanent status issue, set aside the parties’ agreed interim allocations of authority and responsibility, or advise that a legal consequence of Israel’s actions is that it is required to withdraw from the occupied territories without the comprehensive, just and lasting peace envisioned as a result of “land for peace”, could contravene and significantly risk supplanting the established framework. It could harm the parties' ability to negotiate a settlement to their dispute, including by inadvertently complicating efforts to de-escalate rising tensions in the West Bank, such as meetings in the fledgling Aqaba-Sharm El Sheikh format, entrenching the parties in their positions, and driving them further apart. It could also encourage elements on either side to engage in actions that further harm, rather than advance, the prospect of a just and lasting negotiated peace.

⁶⁷ Construction of a Wall, Advisory Opinion, 2004 I.C.J. at 158-59, ¶ 49.

3.21 That the Court should consider how to avoid impinging on the very subject matter of the underlying dispute further follows from the Court's advisory opinion in Western Sahara. There, the Court noted that advising the General Assembly on the question of settlement of Morocco's rights over the Western Sahara at the time of colonization would not affect the rights of Spain as the administering power.⁷⁰ The Court also noted as relevant the fact that the General Assembly was not seeking the Court's advice in order to, "on the basis of the Court's opinion, exercise its powers and functions for the peaceful settlement of that dispute or controversy."⁷¹

3.22 Responding to the referral questions here by providing advice that, as a practical matter, obviates the means prescribed by the Security Council and recognized by the General Assembly to resolve the dispute – direct negotiations – would place the Court in the role of a dispute resolution mechanism rather than adviser. While this is a role the Court is necessarily tasked with in the context of contentious proceedings premised on the parties' consent, the Court has repeatedly recognized that its advisory jurisdiction is distinct and not the appropriate means of resolving a dispute between parties.⁷² The Court should continue to be mindful of this distinction and decline the invitation of those who would seek to avoid or undermine direct negotiations by asking the Court to decide on the issues that the parties and the Security Council and General Assembly have identified as forming the heart of the dispute and that can only be resolved through such negotiations. It is vital that, every effort be made to preserve the established framework and create the conditions for a return of the parties to direct negotiations where they can resolve all permanent status issues. It is also vital that the parties be encouraged to refrain from unilateral actions at cross purposes with such a return.

CHAPTER IV

THE REFERRAL INVITES EXAMINATION OF THE ESTABLISHED FRAMEWORK ON THE BASIS OF ASSUMPTIONS NOT SUPPORTED BY INTERNATIONAL LAW

4.1 As noted, to fulfill its duties, the Court “must first ascertain the meaning and full implications of the question in the light of the actual framework of fact and law in which it falls for consideration.”⁷³

4.2 The second referred question rests on a faulty premise. It asks the Court to opine on how the policies, practices and alleged violations referred to in the first question, including Israel’s prolonged occupation, settlement and annexation of occupied territory “affect the legal status of the occupation.” The straightforward answer is the legal status of the occupation under international humanitarian law results from the fact of occupation alone. The legal status of a belligerent occupation under international humanitarian law does not change if the occupation is prolonged or if alleged violations of international humanitarian law or other international law have been committed by the Occupying Power.⁷⁴

4.3 Under customary international law, as reflected in Article 42 of the Regulations Respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land, Annex to Convention (IV) Respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land (“Hague IV Regulations”), territory is considered occupied when it is actually placed under the authority of the hostile army.⁷⁵ The occupation extends only to the territory where such authority has been established and can be exercised.⁷⁶ The fact of occupation is the basis for the Occupying Power to exercise authority, including through a security presence, over the occupied territory and for the application of a framework of legal rights and duties to which the Occupying Power is bound.⁷⁷ Although belligerent occupation

⁷³ 1951 Agreement, Advisory Opinion, 1980 I.C.J. at 76, ¶10.

⁷⁷ See id. at 230, ¶ 173 (“In order to reach a conclusion as to whether a State, the military forces of which are present on the territory of another State as a result of an intervention, is an ‘occupying Power’ in the meaning of the term as understood in the jus in bello, the Court must examine whether there is sufficient evidence to demonstrate that the said authority was in fact established and exercised by the intervening State in the areas in question.”) is temporary in nature, international humanitarian law continues to apply for however long an occupation exists in fact.⁷⁸

4.4 In Construction of a Wall, the Court opined that Israel had violated particular prohibitions under international humanitarian law applicable to Occupying Powers and accordingly that Israel must cease such violations and provide compensation for them.⁷⁹ At the same time, the Court recognized that Israel's status as an Occupying Power had continued for many years and affirmed the applicability of the Geneva Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War ("Fourth Geneva Convention") to the territory occupied by Israel since 1967.⁸⁰

4.5 The Security Council and General Assembly have declared that any actions to change the status of occupied territory are null and void and do not affect the continued application of the Fourth Geneva Convention.⁸¹ Occupation law also makes clear that protected persons in occupied territory remain subject to the protections of that law, regardless of any purported legal changes introduced by the Occupying Power, until the occupation ceases.⁸²

4.6 As it did in Construction of a Wall, should the Court address the second question, it should reaffirm that occupation law continues to apply based on the fact of occupation. As the

Occupying Power, Israel has important rights and obligations under international humanitarian law that continue to apply regardless of alleged violations of international humanitarian law or other international law.⁸³ Thus, to the extent the second question could be construed as asking the Court to declare that the Israeli occupation has been rendered unlawful or void, the Court should decline that invitation on the basis that such an assessment is not supported by international law.

⁸³ See Armed Activities on the Territory of the Congo, Separate Opinion of Judge Kooijmans, 2005 I.C.J. at 157, ¶ 58 (“In their interrelationship the rules on occupation form an important part of the jus in bello or international humanitarian law. The main purpose of that law is to protect persons caught up in conflict, even if it does take into account the interests of the belligerent parties. It does not differentiate between belligerents. In particular, no distinction is made in the jus in bello between an occupation resulting from a lawful use of force and one which is the result of aggression. The latter issue is decided by application of the jus ad bellum, the law on the use of force, which attributes responsibility for the commission of the acts of which the occupation is the result.”).

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION: A JUST AND LASTING PEACE REQUIRES DIRECT NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN THE PARTIES

5.1 It remains vital that every effort be made to create the conditions for a return of the parties to direct negotiations where they can address the permanent status issues central to realizing the goal of two States living side-by-side in peace and security. As recognized by the Security Council, the General Assembly, this Court, and the parties themselves, only through such negotiation within the established framework based on the “land for peace” principle can a comprehensive, just and lasting resolution to the conflict be achieved. As such, and in light of the current context, it is urgent that steps are taken by the United Nations, its Member States, and the parties to create such conditions. It is likewise critical that the Court’s opinion here serves this objective and does not inadvertently undermine the established framework, consistent with the interests and proper functions of the Security Council and General Assembly and the fundamental principle of consent to judicial settlement.

5.2 That direct permanent status negotiations between the parties are not currently occurring does not mean that a negotiated two-State solution is no longer viable. While escalated violence and deep mistrust may hinder progress, practical steps can still be taken to create the requisite conditions for a return to the negotiations needed to achieve peace, security, and the full realization of Palestinian self-determination. As the General Assembly stressed in its December 2022 resolution “Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine,” there is a need to urgently exert collective efforts to launch credible negotiations on all final status issues in the Middle East peace process . . . and calls once more for the intensification of efforts by the parties, including through meaningful negotiations, with the support of the international community, towards the conclusion of a final just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement . . .⁸⁴

5.3 Such efforts include, but are not limited to, the meetings in the Aqaba-Sharm El Sheikh format that began earlier this year, aimed at de-escalation and reinvigorating political dialogue between the parties. With the support of the United States and regional partners Egypt and Jordan, the Israelis and Palestinians recommitted themselves to their prior agreements and affirmed their interest in “consolidating the basis for direct negotiations between the Palestinians and Israelis, towards achieving comprehensive, just and lasting peace.”⁸⁵ While the United States is mindful of the concerns that informed the General Assembly’s decision to submit its request to the Court, such meetings and dialogue demonstrate the continued relevance of a negotiated solution and can be built upon by the international community to lay the groundwork for a return to negotiations, as the Security Council and General Assembly have urged. The parties have also continued, despite difficulties and overt differences, to maintain contacts that reinforce principles to which they agreed in the Oslo Accords, especially on security cooperation.⁸⁶

5.4 To make progress, however, it is also essential that the parties abide by their commitments and agreements and cease unilateral actions that do nothing but exacerbate tensions, hinder the prospect of a two-State solution, and drive them further from peace. These unilateral actions include advancement of settlements, the pursuit of statehood objectives outside of negotiations, demolition of homes, and the incitement to or glorification of acts of violence.⁸⁷ When the Israelis and Palestinians pursue such unilateral measures instead of negotiation in the established framework, violence and mistrust rise and serve neither of their interests. Nor does it serve the purposes of the framework continuously supported by the Security Council and General Assembly. Instead, the parties must pursue direct negotiation, as only through negotiations under the established framework can they achieve a durable peace that gives rise to an independent and viable Palestinian State living safely and securely alongside Israel, with both populations enjoying equal measures of freedom and prosperity. As the Court observed in Construction of a Wall, there is an “urgent necessity for the United Nations as a whole to redouble its efforts to bring the Israeli-Palestinian conflict . . . to a speedy conclusion, thereby establishing a just and lasting peace in the region.”⁸⁸ The Court’s opinion here should reinforce this exhortation, which remains no less true today.

5.5 While the Court has previously provided an advisory opinion on a discrete aspect of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, the expansive yet one-sided and conclusory questions presented ⁸⁶ See supra note 35.

⁸⁷ The General Assembly recently called upon both parties to act responsibly and in compliance with international law and their previous agreements and obligations, in both their policies and actions, in order to, with the support of the Quartet and other interested parties, urgently reverse negative trends, including all measures taken on the ground that are contrary to international law, and create the conditions necessary for a credible political horizon and the advancement of peace efforts.

G.A. Res. 77/25, ¶ 5, U.N. Doc. A/RES/77/25 (Nov. 30, 2022) [Dossier No. 516]; see also id. ¶ 7 (“[s]tresses the need, in particular, for an immediate halt to all settlement activities, land confiscation and home demolitions”).

here could be understood to invite the Court to resolve the very permanent status issues that the parties agreed to negotiate in the Oslo Accords, and to draw legal conclusions that strike at the heart of the interdependent “land for peace” principle that is the foundation of the established negotiating framework continually endorsed and supported by the United Nations.

5.6 The Court, to preserve the integrity of its judicial function, should exercise its discretion to render its opinion with due respect for the responsibilities both the Security Council and General Assembly have exercised in addressing this conflict through a negotiating framework, and consistent with the principle of consent. It is imperative for the Court to ensure that its opinion, even if addressing legal consequences of alleged violations of international law, is tailored to preserve the parties’ ability to negotiate peace and a two-State solution consistent with the established framework stemming from Security Council resolutions 242 and 338, continually supported by the General Assembly and adopted in the agreements of the parties.⁸⁹ If the Court were to identify any concerns with its ability to address the questions referred within the established negotiating framework, it is essential that the Court exercise its discretion to opine on matters such that it does not imperil that framework.

5.7 The United States respectfully urges the Court to proceed with caution in weighing its response to the General Assembly’s request. Were the Court to issue an opinion that encompasses “the entire Question of Palestine,”⁹⁰ as some have suggested, or that prejudices or seemingly decides permanent status issues reserved for negotiations, such as borders and security arrangements, this would not advance the objectives of the established negotiating framework, help develop the conditions for a negotiated peace, or ultimately serve the interests and functions of the United Nations. Accordingly, the referral questions should be understood as a request for advice aimed at facilitating the General Assembly’s proper role and function in promoting a negotiated resolution to the conflict within the established framework. The Court’s opinion should advance that objective.⁹¹

Décisions

A sa 1373^e séance, le 9 novembre 1967, le Conseil a décidé d'inviter les représentants de la République arabe unie, d'Israël et de la Jordanie à participer, sans droit de vote, à la discussion de la question intitulée "La situation au Moyen-Orient : Lettre, en date du 7 novembre 1967, adressée au Président du Conseil de sécurité par le représentant permanent de la République arabe unie (S/8226¹¹)".

A sa 1375^e séance, le 13 novembre 1967, le Conseil a décidé d'inviter le représentant de la Syrie à participer, sans droit de vote, à la discussion de la question.

Résolution 242 (1967)

du 22 novembre 1967

Le Conseil de sécurité,

Exprimant l'inquiétude que continue de lui causer la grave situation au Moyen-Orient,

Soulignant l'inadmissibilité de l'acquisition de territoire par la guerre et la nécessité d'oeuvrer pour une paix juste et durable permettant à chaque Etat de la région de vivre en sécurité, ,

Soulignant en outre que tous les Etats Membres, en acceptant la Charte des Nations Unies, ont contracté l'engagement d'agir conformément à l'Article 2 de la Charte,

1. Affirme que l'accomplissement des principes de la Charte exige l'instauration d'une paix juste et durable au Moyen-Orient qui devrait comprendre l'application des deux principes suivants :

- ii) Cessation de toutes assertions de belligérance ou de tous états de belligérance et respect et reconnaissance de la souveraineté, de l'intégrité territoriale et de l'indépendance politique de chaque Etat de la région et de leur droit de vivre en paix à l'intérieur de frontières sûres et reconnues à l'abri de menaces ou d'actes de force;

2. Affirme en outre la nécessité

- a) De garantir la liberté de navigation sur les voies d'eau internationales de la région;

Israel-PLO Recognition: Exchange of Letters between PM Rabin and Chairman Arafat

1. LETTER FROM YASSER ARAFAT TO PRIME MINISTER RABIN:

September 9, 1993

Yitzhak Rabin
Prime Minister of Israel

Mr. Prime Minister,

The signing of the Declaration of Principles marks a new era in the history of the Middle East. In firm conviction thereof, I would like to confirm the following PLO commitments:

The PLO recognizes the right of the State of Israel to exist in peace and security.

The PLO accepts United Nations Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338.

The PLO commits itself to the Middle East peace process, and to a peaceful resolution of the conflict between the two sides and declares that all outstanding issues relating to permanent status will be resolved through negotiations.

The PLO considers that the signing of the Declaration of Principles constitutes a historic event, inaugurating a new epoch of peaceful coexistence, free from violence and all other acts which endanger peace and stability. Accordingly, the PLO renounces the use of terrorism and other acts of violence and will assume responsibility over all PLO elements and personnel in order to assure their compliance, prevent violations and discipline violators.

In view of the promise of a new era and the signing of the Declaration of Principles and based on Palestinian acceptance of Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338, the PLO affirms that those articles of the Palestinian Covenant which deny Israel's right to exist, and the provisions of the Covenant which are inconsistent with the commitments of this letter are now inoperative and no longer valid. Consequently, the PLO undertakes to submit to the Palestinian National Council for formal approval the necessary changes in regard to the Palestinian Covenant.

Sincerely,

Yasser Arafat
Chairman
The Palestine Liberation Organization

2. LETTER FROM YASSER ARAFAT TO NORWEGIAN FOREIGN MINISTER:

September 9, 1993

His Excellency
Johan Jorgen Holst
Foreign Minister of Norway

Dear Minister Holst,

I would like to confirm to you that, upon the signing of the Declaration of Principles, the PLO encourages and calls upon the Palestinian people in the West Bank and Gaza Strip to take part in the steps leading to the normalization of life, rejecting violence and terrorism, contributing to peace and stability and participating actively in shaping reconstruction, economic development and cooperation.

Sincerely,

Yasser Arafat
Chairman
The Palestine Liberation Organization

3. LETTER FROM PRIME MINISTER RABIN TO YASSER ARAFAT:

Declaration of Principles on Interim
Self-Government Arrangements

The Government of the State of Israel and the PLO team (in the Jordanian-Palestinian delegation to the Middle East Peace Conference) (the "Palestinian Delegation"), representing the Palestinian people, agree that it is time to put an end to decades of confrontation and conflict, recognize their mutual legitimate and political rights, and strive to live in peaceful coexistence and mutual dignity and security and achieve a just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement and historic reconciliation through the agreed political process. Accordingly, the two sides agree to the following principles:

Article I

AIM OF THE NEGOTIATIONS

The aim of the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations within the current Middle East peace process is, among other things, to establish a Palestinian Interim Self-Government Authority, the elected Council (the "Council"), for the Palestinian people in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, for a transitional period not exceeding five years, leading to a permanent settlement based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973). It is understood that the interim arrangements are an integral part of the whole peace process and that the negotiations on the permanent status will lead to the implementation of Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973).

Article II

FRAMEWORK FOR THE INTERIM PERIOD

The agreed framework for the interim period is set forth in this Declaration of Principles.

Article III

ELECTIONS

1. In order that the Palestinian people in the West Bank and Gaza Strip may govern themselves according to democratic principles, direct, free and general political elections will be held for the Council under agreed supervision and international observation, while the Palestinian police will ensure public order.

2. An agreement will be concluded on the exact mode and conditions of the elections in accordance with the protocol attached as Annex I, with the goal of holding the elections not later than nine months after the entry into force of this Declaration of Principles.

3. These elections will constitute a significant interim preparatory step toward the realization of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people and their just requirements.

Article IV

Article V

1. The five-year transitional period will begin upon the withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and Jericho area.

2. Permanent status negotiations will commence as soon as possible, but not later than the beginning of the third year of the interim period, between the Government of Israel and the Palestinian people's representatives.

3. It is understood that these negotiations shall cover remaining issues, including: Jerusalem, refugees, settlements, security arrangements, borders, relations and cooperation with other neighbours, and other issues of common interest.

4. The two parties agree that the outcome of the permanent status negotiations should not be prejudiced or preempted by agreements reached for the interim period.

Article VI

PREPARATORY TRANSFER OF POWERS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

1. Upon the entry into force of this Declaration of Principles and the withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and the Jericho area, a transfer of authority from the Israeli military government and its Civil Administration to the authorized Palestinians for this task, as detailed herein, will commence. This transfer of authority will be of a preparatory nature until the inauguration of the Council.

2. Immediately after the entry into force of this Declaration of Principles and the withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and Jericho area, with the view to promoting economic development in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, authority will be transferred to the Palestinians in the following spheres: education and culture, health, social welfare, direct taxation and tourism. 3. The Interim Agreement shall include arrangements, to be implemented upon the inauguration of the Council, for the assumption by the Council of all of the powers and responsibilities transferred previously in accordance with Article VI above.

CHAPITRE I

INTRODUCTION

1.1. Dans son ordonnance datée du 3 février 2023, la Cour a invité, entre autres, les États Membres de l'Organisation des Nations Unies (ONU) à présenter des exposés écrits sur les questions dont l'Assemblée générale l'a saisie par la résolution 77/247 du 30 décembre 2022. Les États-Unis se félicitent de l'occasion qui leur est donnée de soumettre le présent exposé, dans lequel sont formulées leurs observations sur ces questions en vue d'aider la Cour dans l'examen de la demande de l'Assemblée générale.

1.2. Les États-Unis soutiennent depuis des décennies la recherche d'un règlement définitif négocié du conflit israélo-palestinien, en tant que participants, facilitateurs ou témoins de certaines initiatives, dont les plus notables sont la conférence de Madrid de 1991, les accords d'Oslo, le quatuor pour le Moyen-Orient, le sommet de Camp David de 2000, la conférence d'Annapolis de 2007 et d'autres négociations directes parrainées par eux, les plus récentes ayant eu lieu en 2013 et 2014. À Aqaba, en Jordanie, et à Charm el-Cheikh, en Égypte, les États-Unis ont pris part cette année à des pourparlers qui se sont déroulés selon un format visant à favoriser une désescalade et à faciliter le dialogue direct entre représentants israéliens et palestiniens. Forts de ce rôle unique, ils ont voté contre la résolution 77/247 par crainte de voir la demande qui y est formulée détourner les parties au conflit israélo-palestinien de l'objectif d'une solution négociée à deux États — lequel est consacré par nombre de résolutions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale, ainsi que par les initiatives et accords bilatéraux susmentionnés¹.

1.3. Les États-Unis sont profondément préoccupés par l'érosion de la confiance entre les parties constatée ces dernières années et les épisodes de violence accrue. En février 2023, le président du Conseil de sécurité a publié une déclaration, à laquelle se sont joints les États-Unis, dans laquelle il exprimait sa ferme opposition aux mesures unilatérales adoptées par l'une ou l'autre partie pour entraver la paix, demandant à tous de « faire preuve de calme et de retenue et de s'abstenir de tout acte de provocation et d'incitation à la violence, et de toute déclaration incendiaire, dans le but, notamment, de désamorcer la situation sur le terrain, de rétablir la confiance, de montrer par leurs politiques et leurs actes, un véritable attachement à la solution des deux États et de créer les conditions nécessaires à la promotion de la paix »².

Les événements survenus dans les mois qui ont suivi n'ont fait que souligner l'importance de cette priorité donnée à la désescalade en tant que première étape indispensable.

1.4. Comme l'a relevé la Cour, « seule la mise en œuvre de bonne foi de toutes les résolutions pertinentes du Conseil de sécurité, en particulier les résolutions 242 (1967) et 338 (1973) », est susceptible de mettre un terme à la situation tragique au Moyen-Orient³. Depuis l'adoption de la résolution 242 en 1967, les négociations pour parvenir à une fin globale, juste et durable du conflit sont fondées sur le principe de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix »⁴. Ce principe de base prévoit que l'instauration de la paix et de la sécurité dans la région repose sur deux éléments interdépendants : le retrait des forces armées du territoire occupé et la fin du conflit et le respect et la reconnaissance de la souveraineté, de l'intégrité territoriale et de l'indépendance politique de chaque État dans la zone, auxquels s'ajoute le droit de chaque État de vivre en paix, à l'intérieur de frontières sûres et reconnues. Aucun de ces éléments ne suffit à lui seul pour assurer une paix globale, juste et durable ; aucun ne peut être atteint sans l'autre. C'est sur ce socle organisationnel de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix », réaffirmé dans la résolution 338 du Conseil de sécurité⁵, que s'appuie la recherche d'une paix négociée depuis un demi-siècle. Au cours de cette période, ce principe a été à la base de plusieurs accords historiques, tels que le traité de paix égypto-israélien, le traité de paix israélo-jordanien et les accords d'Oslo, aux termes desquels Israéliens et Palestiniens s'étaient notamment engagés à négocier ensemble un règlement du conflit et à mettre sur pied la première autorité autonome palestinienne intérimaire. Il demeure vrai à ce jour que c'est seulement par des négociations de ce type qu'il sera possible d'atteindre la paix globale, juste et durable initialement envisagée par les Nations Unies, qui permettrait à deux États de coexister et aux Israéliens et Palestiniens de bénéficier à part égale de la paix, de la sécurité et de la prospérité.

1.5. Même s'il est actuellement permis de s'inquiéter de ce que les conditions requises pour instaurer la paix ou conduire des négociations à cette fin ne soient pas réunies, les États-Unis restent déterminés à préserver cette voie pour les Israéliens et les Palestiniens. De ce fait, ils s'attachent dans l'immédiat à favoriser la désescalade et la reprise d'échanges fructueux entre représentants des deux parties ainsi qu'à éviter que ne s'éloigne la perspective d'une solution négociée à deux États, fondée sur le cadre défini par les résolutions précitées, puis sans cesse réaffirmé tant par le Conseil de sécurité que par l'Assemblée générale, et conforme à ce cadre⁶. Les États-Unis continuent de déployer des efforts pour créer des conditions plus propices à un règlement négocié du conflit israélo-palestinien et demandent instamment aux autres membres de la communauté internationale d'œuvrer à cette même fin. Ces efforts incluent notamment les récentes rencontres d'Aqaba et de Charm el-Cheikh, qui ont vu les États-Unis se joindre aux délégations égyptienne, jordanienne, israélienne et palestinienne pour favoriser une désescalade des tensions, dissuader les actions unilatérales qui éloignent les parties de la paix et renforcer l'engagement de celles-ci à respecter leurs accords antérieurs⁷.

1.6. Les États-Unis font valoir que c'est par de tels efforts que pourront être créées les conditions nécessaires pour parvenir à une solution négociée à deux États qui conduirait à l'instauration de la paix et de la sécurité pour les deux parties, ainsi qu'à la pleine réalisation de l'autodétermination palestinienne. Comme cela est exposé ci-après, la résolution par laquelle l'Assemblée a saisi la Cour reconnaît elle-même la nécessité de faire avancer des négociations constructives visant à conclure un accord de paix à cette fin. En conformité avec les fonctions respectives que leur confère la Charte des Nations Unies, le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale ont plaidé de longue date en faveur de l'établissement d'un cadre de négociation pour régler le conflit. Les questions posées à la Cour doivent donc être comprises comme une demande d'avis dont l'objet est de faciliter l'exercice par l'Assemblée générale du rôle et des fonctions qui lui sont propres au sein du système des Nations Unies afin de promouvoir un règlement négocié du conflit. Il est essentiel que l'avis consultatif de la Cour aide à atteindre cet objet.

1.7. Le présent exposé commence, au chapitre II, par décrire le cadre initialement défini par les résolutions 242 et 338 du Conseil de sécurité, entériné par l'Assemblée générale, reconnu par la Cour dans son avis consultatif sur l'édification d'un mur, et adopté par l'État d'Israël et l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine (OLP) dans leurs propres accords comme base de règlement négocié du conflit israélo-palestinien.

1.8. S'appuyant sur des principes que la Cour a jugés fondamentaux pour l'intégrité de sa fonction consultative et de son rôle en tant qu'organe principal de l'ONU, le chapitre III expose ensuite des raisons décisives pour lesquelles la Cour devrait exercer son pouvoir discrétionnaire en examinant les questions dont elle a été saisie dans le cadre de négociation établi. Cette approche est également justifiée par le fait que les questions de l'Assemblée invitent la Cour à se prononcer sur certains points qui sont au cœur du conflit, traitent d'actes présumés commis par une seule partie en avançant des conclusions de droit international, et ont été incorporées très tardivement dans la résolution 77/247 après des consultations a minima entre États Membres de l'ONU.

1.9. Le chapitre IV met en lumière certaines présomptions qui sous-tendent la seconde question posée et méconnaissent les principes constants du droit international. Dans la mesure où cette question peut être interprétée comme l'invitant à dire que l'occupation israélienne a été frappée d'illicéité ou de nullité, la Cour devrait s'y refuser, au motif qu'une telle appréciation est sans fondement en droit international.

1.10. Enfin, dans le chapitre V, les États-Unis concluent le présent exposé en priant respectueusement la Cour de faire montre de prudence, de ne pas écorner le principe fondamental de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix » qui sous-tend le cadre établi pour la paix et la sécurité israélo-palestiniennes et de rechercher, dans son avis, la meilleure manière de servir l'objectif de facilitation du rôle et de la fonction de l'Assemblée générale par la promotion d'un règlement négocié du conflit.

CHAPITRE II

LE CADRE ÉTABLI POUR PARVENIR À UN RÈGLEMENT NÉGOCIÉ DU CONFLIT ISRAÉLO-PALESTINIEN

2.1. Tout au long de l'histoire tumultueuse et souvent violente du conflit israélo-palestinien, l'ONU n'a eu de cesse de soutenir la proposition selon laquelle une paix globale, juste et durable devait résulter de négociations directes entre les parties au conflit, et non être imposée de l'extérieur ou par une seule partie. Ce principe est au cœur des résolutions 242 et 338 du Conseil de sécurité et a été repris dans des résolutions adoptées depuis lors par celui-ci et l'Assemblée générale, y compris celle par laquelle la Cour a été saisie en l'espèce. De même, Israéliens et Palestiniens ont eux-mêmes entériné ce principe dans les années 1990 en l'incluant dans la déclaration de principes et d'autres accords, dénommés collectivement les « accords d'Oslo ». Il convient notamment de noter que les parties ont précisément élaboré leur accord afin de négocier les « [questions touchant] le statut permanent » essentielles au règlement de leur différend, notamment celles de Jérusalem, des colonies, des dispositifs de sécurité, des frontières et autres⁸. Malgré les tragiques épisodes de violence, les actions unilatérales entreprises de part et d'autre et les allégations de chacune des parties dénonçant les manquements de l'autre à ses engagements, ni les parties, ni l'Assemblée générale, ni le Conseil de sécurité n'ont renoncé au précepte central selon lequel des négociations directes sur la base du principe de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix » constituent la voie vers une paix et une sécurité globales, justes et durables.

2.2. Les États-Unis soutiennent respectueusement que c'est dans ce contexte que la Cour doit examiner les questions soumises par l'Assemblée générale. Pour l'aider dans cette tâche, le présent chapitre expose le cadre de négociation à la lumière duquel les questions posées doivent être entendues. Dans la section A est décrit le cadre de négociation en tant que tel, qui trouve son origine dans les résolutions 242 et 338 du Conseil de sécurité, et a été précisé et consigné dans les accords bilatéraux conclus par la suite par les Israéliens et les Palestiniens. La section B montre l'adhésion constante de l'ONU à ce même cadre de négociation. La section C revient sur les efforts déployés ces dernières années par les parties dans ce cadre de négociation. Enfin, la section D décrit le processus par lequel la résolution de saisine a été adoptée et la manière dont elle fait également bien le cadre de négociation établi.

A. L'élaboration du cadre de négociation établi

2.3. Le cadre établi en vue d'un règlement négocié du conflit israélo-palestinien est le fruit de plusieurs décennies d'élaboration, qui ont débuté par des résolutions du Conseil de sécurité adoptées en réponse aux guerres arabo-israéliennes de 1967 et de 1973 ; il a ensuite été précisé et entériné par les Israéliens et les Palestiniens dans leurs accords bilatéraux, en particulier les accords d'Oslo. Au cours de cette période, le principe fondamental était que la voie à suivre pour parvenir à une paix et une sécurité globales, justes et durables au Moyen-Orient était la négociation fondée sur le principe de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix ».

2.4. Les bases du cadre de négociation ont été établies par la résolution 242 (1967) du Conseil de sécurité, dans laquelle il

« [affirmait] que ... l'instauration d'une paix juste et durable au Moyen-Orient ... devrait comprendre l'application des deux principes suivants :

- i) [r]etrait des forces armées israéliennes des territoires occupés lors du récent conflit ; [et]
- ii) [c]essation de toutes assertions de belligérance ou de tous états de belligérance et respect et reconnaissance de la souveraineté de l'intégrité territoriale et de l'indépendance politique de chaque État de la région et de leur droit de vivre en paix à l'intérieur de frontières sûres et reconnues à l'abri de menaces ou d'actes de force »⁹.

Ce sont ces éléments interdépendants qui définissent la notion d'« échange de territoires contre la paix ». Dans ce texte, le Conseil de sécurité poursuivait en demandant que soit désigné un représentant spécial pour « favoriser un accord » et « seconder les efforts tendant à aboutir à un règlement pacifique et accepté, conformément aux dispositions et aux principes » de la résolution¹⁰.

2.5. Dans sa résolution 338 (1973), le Conseil de sécurité a ensuite réitéré son appel à l'application des dispositions susdites et exhorté au commencement immédiat de négociations « en vue d'instaurer une paix juste et durable au Moyen-Orient »¹¹.

2.6. Ces résolutions ont été le socle sur lequel a reposé la recherche d'une paix globale négociée entre Israël et ses États voisins, mais aussi entre Israël et les Palestiniens. Israël et l'Égypte se sont appuyés sur le principe de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix » pour conclure le traité de paix de 1979, tout comme l'ont fait la Jordanie et Israël lorsqu'ils sont parvenus à leur propre accord de paix en 1994¹². En 1991, à la conférence de paix de Madrid sur le Moyen-Orient, convoquée par les États-Unis et l'Union soviétique, les Israéliens, Jordaniens, Libanais et Syriens, mais aussi les Palestiniens, se sont réunis pour la première fois, aux côtés d'autres interlocuteurs, avec pour objectif commun de parvenir à une paix globale par la voie de négociations directes sur la base de ce même paradigme¹³.

2.7. Par la suite, en 1993, les accords d'Oslo ont permis d'engranger d'autres réussites. L'OLP a reconnu l'État d'Israël et les Israéliens ont reconnu l'OLP comme représentant du peuple palestinien¹⁴. Les parties se sont en outre engagées, dans le premier des accords d’Oslo, à savoir la déclaration de principes sur des arrangements intérimaires d’autonomie (ci-après la « déclaration de principes ») signée à Washington, à parvenir à un « règlement de paix juste, durable et global » par le processus politique convenu, à reconnaître « leurs droits légitimes et politiques mutuels » et à mener des négociations pour établir une autorité palestinienne intérimaire autonome pour les Palestiniens de Cisjordanie et de la bande de Gaza pendant une période transitoire, ainsi que des négociations sur le statut permanent qui seraient fondées sur les résolutions 242 et 338 du Conseil de sécurité et conduiraient à leur application¹⁵. Autrement dit, elles ont adopté dans leurs accords bilatéraux le paradigme de négociation de « l’échange de territoires contre la paix » qui avait été énoncé dans ces résolutions.

2.8. Plus spécifiquement, la déclaration de principes définissait un cadre pour les négociations israélo-palestiniennes et inaugurerait le processus de mise en place d’institutions palestiniennes autonomes. Il y était réaffirmé que les parties avaient pour objectif commun de trouver une solution négociée à des questions liées au statut permanent qui « aboutir[ait] à l’application des résolutions 242 (1967) et 338 (1973) du Conseil de sécurité »¹⁶ et précisé que ces négociations « sur le statut permanent » visaient à couvrir un certain nombre de questions, parmi lesquelles Jérusalem, les réfugiés, les colonies, les dispositifs de sécurité, les frontières, les relations et la coopération avec d’autres voisins, et d’autres questions d’intérêt commun¹⁷. Enfin, elle décrivait les modalités de la tenue d’élections palestiniennes en tant qu’« étape préparatoire intérimaire importante sur la voie de la réalisation des droits légitimes du peuple palestinien et de ses justes revendications », tout en exposant un premier cadre de distribution des pouvoirs et responsabilités entre l’autorité palestinienne intérimaire et le gouvernement militaire israélien et son administration civile¹⁸.

2.9. Dans le deuxième accord d’Oslo, l’accord intérimaire israélo-palestinien de 1995 sur la Rive occidentale [Cisjordanie] et la bande de Gaza (ci-après l’« accord intérimaire »), les parties réaffirmaient « que les négociations sur le statut permanent … conduir[aie]nt à la mise en œuvre des résolutions 242 et 338 du Conseil de sécurité »¹⁹.

2.10. L’accord intérimaire exposait en détail les arrangements auxquels étaient parvenues les parties quant à l’attribution des responsabilités et de la compétence en Cisjordanie et à Gaza dans l’attente d’une solution négociée, établissant, par exemple, différents arrangements en matière de compétence entre le gouvernement militaire israélien et son administration civile, d’un côté, et l’entité intérimaire palestinienne (désormais appelée « autorité palestinienne »), de l’autre, en ce qui concerne les zones A, B et C de la Cisjordanie, ainsi que sur la répartition des responsabilités en matière de sécurité²⁰. De plus, ainsi que cela est indiqué dans la section C ci-après, bien que le souhait, qui y était formulé, de parvenir à un règlement négocié définitif au terme d’un délai bien défini n’ait pas été exaucé, les accords d’Oslo n’en demeurent pas moins le cadre de référence pour la répartition intérimaire des pouvoirs entre Israël et l’autorité palestinienne et les relations et négociations israélo-palestiniennes. Tel a toujours été le cas, même dans les périodes de fortes tensions.

B. L'ONU a apporté un soutien indéfectible à un règlement du conflit fondé sur ce cadre de négociation établi de longue date

2.11. Même lorsque les conditions pour des négociations sur le statut permanent ont été troublées par des épisodes de violence, d'actions unilatérales et de défiance, l'ONU n'a cessé d'apporter son soutien au cadre établi en tant que base pour parvenir à une solution à deux États et mettre fin au différend. En 2008, exprimant son soutien aux négociations directes qui se déroulaient à la conférence d'Annapolis, le Conseil de sécurité a ainsi relevé, dans sa résolution 1850 (2008), l'« irréversibilité des négociations bilatérales » et déclaré qu'il *« appu[yait] les principes convenus par les parties pour le processus de négociations bilatérales et leurs efforts résolus visant à atteindre l'objectif de la conclusion d'un traité de paix qui résoudrait toutes les questions non réglées »*²¹. En 2016, il a de nouveau préconisé vivement

*« l'intensification et l'accélération des efforts diplomatiques entrepris et de l'appui apporté aux niveaux international et régional en vue de parvenir sans tarder à une paix globale, juste et durable au Moyen-Orient, sur la base de résolutions pertinentes de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, du mandat de la conférence de Madrid, y compris le principe de l'échange de territoires contre la paix, de l'Initiative de paix arabe et de la Feuille de route du Quatuor, et de mettre fin à l'occupation israélienne qui a commencé en 1967 »*²².

Le Conseil a aussi *« [r]appel[é] qu'il [était] déterminé à apporter son appui aux parties tout au long des négociations et dans la mise en œuvre d'un accord »*²³.

2.12. Cette année encore, le Conseil de sécurité a publié une déclaration de sa présidente ainsi libellée :

*« Le Conseil réaffirme son attachement indéfectible à la vision de la solution des deux États où deux États démocratiques, Israël et la Palestine, vivent côte à côte, en paix, à l'intérieur de frontières sûres et reconnues, dans le respect du droit international et des résolutions pertinentes de l'Organisation des Nations Unies. »*²⁴

2.13. Quant à l'Assemblée générale, organe qui a sollicité l'avis de la Cour en l'espèce, elle a, de la même manière, continué de souligner avec constance et vigueur la nécessité pour les parties de se conformer à leurs accords bilatéraux et de négocier un règlement définitif de leur différend sur la base du cadre établi à cette fin, y compris le principe de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix »²⁵.

2.14. De fait, dans les semaines qui ont précédé l'adoption de la résolution par laquelle elle a saisi la Cour, l'Assemblée générale a, dans sa résolution récurrente intitulée « Règlement pacifique de la question de Palestine », engagé

« la communauté internationale à redoubler d'efforts coordonnés pour rétablir un horizon politique et pour favoriser et accélérer la conclusion d'un traité de paix dans la perspective de mettre fin sans délai à l'occupation israélienne remontant à 1967 en réglant toutes les questions en suspens, y compris toutes celles relatives au statut final, sans exception, en vue de parvenir à un règlement juste, durable et pacifique du conflit israélo-palestinien sur la base de la solution des deux États reconnue sur le plan international et, à terme, du conflit arabo-israélien dans son ensemble afin d'instaurer une paix globale au Moyen-Orient »²⁶.

2.15. Dans la résolution précitée, s'agissant en particulier du règlement du différend, l'Assemblée générale a de nouveau appelé à l'instauration d'une paix globale « sur le fondement des résolutions pertinentes de l'Organisation des Nations Unies ... du mandat de la Conférence de Madrid, y compris le principe de l'échange de territoires contre la paix ... et [...] réaffirm[é] son appui indéfectible ... au règlement prévoyant deux États, Israël et la Palestine, vivant côté à côté dans la paix et la sécurité »²⁷.

2.16. Ainsi que cela est exposé plus avant dans la section D, dans la résolution même par laquelle elle adressait ses questions à la Cour, l'Assemblée générale a une fois encore saisi l'occasion pour réaffirmer son appui à un règlement du différend qui aboutirait à deux États vivant côté à côté dans la paix et la sécurité, sur le fondement du cadre de négociation établi de longue date.

C. Les parties ont maintenu le cadre de négociation en question

2.17. Avec l'appui de l'ONU et par l'entremise des États-Unis et d'autres, les parties se sont régulièrement, depuis les accords d'Oslo, retrouvées à la table des négociations pour échanger sur leur avenir et elles ont reconnu le besoin persistant de négociations directes sur la base du cadre établi

²⁵ Voir, par exemple, dossier, pièces n° 252-72 (« Souveraineté permanente du peuple palestinien dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est, et de la population arabe dans le Golan syrien occupé sur leurs ressources naturelles ») ; par. 353-381 (« Le droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination ») ; par. 403 et 405 (« Conférence internationale de la paix sur le Moyen-Orient ») ; par. 406-409 (« Question de Palestine ») ; par. 490-516 (« Règlement pacifique de la question de Palestine ») ; par. 811-836 (« Pratiques israéliennes affectant les droits de l'homme du peuple palestinien dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est ») ; voir également, par exemple, Nations Unies, Assemblée générale, résolution 77/30 du 8 décembre 2022, doc. A/RES/73/89, « Pour une paix globale, juste et durable au Moyen-Orient » [dossier, pièce n° 592] (« Demande à nouveau qu'une paix globale, juste et durable soit instaurée sans délai au Moyen-Orient sur le fondement des résolutions pertinentes de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, notamment la résolution 2334 (2016) du Conseil de sécurité en date du 23 décembre 2016, du mandat de la Conférence de Madrid, y compris le principe de l'échange de territoires contre la paix, de l'Initiative de paix arabe et de la feuille de route du Quatuor, et que soit mis fin à l'occupation israélienne qui a commencé en 1967, y compris à Jérusalem-Est, et, à cet égard, réaffirme son appui indéfectible, conforme au droit international, au règlement prévoyant deux États, Israël et la Palestine, vivant côté à côté dans la paix et la sécurité, à l'intérieur de frontières reconnues sur la base de celles d'avant 1967. »)

à cet effet²⁸. Malgré l'absence de progrès réalisés ces dernières années, elles ont réaffirmé leur volonté de respecter leurs accords antérieurs dans lesquels avait été adopté le principe de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix ». Par exemple, le 20 décembre 2019, le procureur général d'Israël a publié un mémorandum concernant la question de la compétence de la Cour pénale internationale (CPI) dans l'affaire de la Situation dans l'État de Palestine, dans lequel il affirmait ce qui suit :

« Les résolutions 242 (1967) et 338 (1973) du Conseil de sécurité de l'ONU ... énoncent le mandat des négociations israélo-palestiniennes (étant donné qu'elles ont été acceptées comme telles par les parties) [et] Israël considère également que la tragédie du conflit israélo-palestinien ne peut trouver d'issue que par un dialogue direct entre les parties qui soit sensible aux besoins et aspirations des Israéliens comme des Palestiniens. »²⁹

2.18. Dans les observations qu'ils ont présentées devant la CPI en 2020, les Palestiniens ont eux aussi confirmé leur volonté de respecter les accords d'Oslo et le cadre de négociation établi en « réaffirm[ant] [leur] engagement en faveur d'un règlement du conflit israélo-palestinien fondé sur une solution à deux États ... par la voie de négociations se déroulant sous une égide internationale (telle que le Quatuor international) et dans le cadre d'une conférence de paix internationale, sur la base des résolutions de l'ONU et du droit international »³⁰.

2.19. De plus, ainsi que cela a déjà été indiqué, en février de cette année, Palestiniens et Israéliens se sont réunis à Aqaba, en Jordanie, aux côtés des États-Unis, de l'Égypte et de la Jordanie pour des pourparlers de désescalade, au cours desquels ils « ont affirmé leur volonté de respecter tous leurs accords bilatéraux antérieurs et d'œuvrer en vue de parvenir à une paix juste et durable »³¹.

³¹ Communiqué d'Aqaba, supra, note 7.

2.20 Le mois suivant, en mars 2023, Palestiniens et Israéliens se sont rencontrés, en présence des États-Unis et d'autres, à Charm el-Cheikh, en Égypte, où ils ont de nouveau exprimé, dans un communiqué conjoint, leur engagement indéfectible envers tous les accords antérieurs qui les lient³². Les parties ont réitéré « leur accord en vue de traiter toutes les questions en suspens par un dialogue direct »³³. Il convient surtout de relever qu'elles ont affirmé leur engagement à créer les conditions d'un règlement du conflit par des négociations directes, déclarant qu'elles

« se réjouiss[ai]ent de coopérer ensemble afin de consolider les fondements des négociations directes entre Palestiniens et Israéliens, dans la perspective de parvenir à une paix globale, juste et durable, et entend[ai]ent encourager la coopération et la coexistence entre tous les peuples du Moyen-Orient »³⁴.

2.21. Ainsi, les parties israélienne et palestinienne ont reconnu, pas plus tard que cette année et nonobstant les niveaux actuels de violence et de défiance, que leurs accords antérieurs demeuraient pertinents. En outre, elles n'ont cessé de maintenir des échanges confortant les principes auxquels elles ont toutes deux souscrit³⁵. Ces accords et efforts sont fondés sur le principe de négociation de l'« échange de territoires contre la paix » en vue d'atteindre une paix globale, juste et durable, principe initialement formulé, et sans cesse confirmé par la suite, par l'ONU.

D. La confirmation du cadre de négociation dans la résolution par laquelle l'Assemblée générale a saisi la Cour

2.22. Dans ce contexte, le 30 décembre 2022, l'Assemblée générale a adopté la résolution 77/247 par le vote affirmatif de seulement 87 de ses États membres³⁶. Bien qu'il soit pour le reste largement identique à la plus récente d'une longue série de résolutions de l'Assemblée générale ayant le même intitulé — la résolution 75/98 (2020)³⁷ —, ce texte a, depuis cette résolution, ³⁵ Les pourparlers de Charm el-Cheikh et d'Aqaba visant à désamorcer les tensions s'inscrivent dans une succession d'échanges — se déroulant publiquement ou en coulisses — entre de hauts dirigeants israéliens et palestiniens. Ces discussions s'efforcent dans une large mesure de promouvoir la désescalade, objectif essentiel à la création des conditions pour mener les négociations visant à régler les questions liées au statut définitif et parvenir en fin de compte à une solution à deux États. Ces échanges se sont poursuivis sous les différents gouvernements israéliens. Voir, par exemple, E. Fabian et L. perdu l'appui de 60 États membres lorsqu'il a été modifié pour inclure une demande d'avis consultatif adressée à la Cour sur les deux questions suivantes :

- a) Quelles sont les conséquences juridiques de la violation persistante par Israël du droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination, de son occupation, de sa colonisation et de son annexation prolongées du territoire palestinien occupé depuis 1967, notamment des mesures visant à modifier la composition démographique, le caractère et le statut de la ville sainte de Jérusalem, et de l'adoption par Israël des lois et mesures discriminatoires connexes ?
- b) Quelle incidence les politiques et pratiques d'Israël visées ... ci-dessus ont-elles sur le statut juridique de l'occupation et quelles sont les conséquences juridiques qui en découlent pour tous les États et l'Organisation des Nations Unies ?³⁸

2.23. Ainsi qu'exposé dans le chapitre III, certains États membres se sont dits préoccupés de ce que cet appel à la Cour puisse compromettre la perspective de la tenue de négociations israélo-palestiniennes à l'avenir — ce qui ne serait pas en phase avec l'appui constant apporté par l'Assemblée générale au règlement du différend par voie de négociations.

2.24. La résolution 77/247 elle-même réitère la proposition fondamentale selon laquelle la seule voie à emprunter pour résoudre le conflit est celle de la négociation sur les questions liées au statut permanent, conformément au cadre établi. Elle relève la nécessité urgente de « rétablir un horizon politique qui permette de faire avancer et d'accélérer des négociations constructives visant à conclure un accord de paix qui mettra totalement fin à l'occupation israélienne commencée en 1967 et à résoudre, sans exception, toutes les questions fondamentales relatives au statut final afin de parvenir à un règlement pacifique, juste, durable et global de la question de Palestine³⁹ ».

2.25. La résolution souligne également

« que les accords israélo-palestiniens conclus dans le cadre du processus de paix au Moyen-Orient, y compris les accords de Charm el-Cheikh, doivent être pleinement respectés et que la feuille de route du Quatuor en vue d'un règlement permanent du conflit israélo-palestinien prévoyant deux États doit être mise en œuvre »⁴⁰.

2.26. De surcroît, il est précisé dans le libellé de la demande adressée à la Cour que celle-ci doit rendre son avis consultatif en prenant en considération les résolutions pertinentes du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale ainsi que son avis sur l'édification d'un mur, qui, tous, confirment le cadre de négociation établi⁴¹.

2.27. Par conséquent, la résolution par laquelle l'Assemblée générale s'est adressée à la Cour se réfère et souscrit au cadre susmentionné visant à parvenir à une paix négociée, notamment par une solution permanente à deux États, les questions soumises devant donc être examinées dans ce contexte. La Cour devra également tenir compte des vues qui ont toujours été celles de l'Assemblée générale et du Conseil de sécurité, et sur lesquelles les parties se sont appuyées dans leur dialogue, à savoir que ce n'est que par la voie des négociations que le conflit peut être réglé globalement, en ce compris toutes les questions relatives au statut définitif telles que les frontières et les arrangements de sécurité.

CHAPITRE III

DES RAISONS DÉCISIVES JUSTIFIENT QUE LA COUR TRAITE LES QUESTIONS DONT ELLE EST SAISIE DANS LES LIMITES DU CADRE ÉTABLI

3.1. Les États-Unis font valoir qu'il existe des raisons décisives pour que la Cour traite les questions que lui a posées l'Assemblée générale dans les limites du cadre établi afin que les parties négocient le règlement des questions liées au statut permanent qui sont au cœur de leur différend, telles que la question des frontières ou celle des arrangements de sécurité. Ces raisons procèdent de deux considérations étroitement liées : en premier lieu, le rôle important que continue de jouer l'ONU dans les efforts entrepris pour régler le conflit israélo-palestinien, notamment au moyen des multiples résolutions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale appelant à un règlement négocié ; et, en second lieu, la mesure dans laquelle les questions posées à la Cour mettent en jeu le principe du consentement au règlement judiciaire d'un différend d'ordre territorial pour lequel il existe un cadre établi aux fins de l'examen des questions litigieuses par voie de négociation. En outre, étant donné que les questions sont rédigées de sorte à couvrir les actes d'une seule des parties au différend et à ne tirer des conclusions juridiques qu'à leur égard, la prudence est de mise.

3.2. Il est bien établi que la Cour est dans « l'obligation de s'assurer, chaque fois qu'elle est saisie d'une demande d'avis, de l'opportunité d'exercer sa fonction judiciaire »⁴². La Cour, tout comme sa devancière la Cour permanente de Justice internationale, a reconnu les limites inhérentes à la compétence consultative qui découlent de son caractère judiciaire⁴³. Ces considérations, dont elle a estimé qu'elles pouvaient la conduire à refuser de donner un avis, lui permettent aussi de décider de répondre aux questions posées dans leur totalité ou de restreindre la portée de sa réponse⁴⁴. La Cour a également reconnu la nécessité de tenir compte de « l'origine et [de] la portée du différend » pour apprécier l'opportunité d'exercer sa compétence consultative, notamment lorsqu'il s'agit de confirmer que son avis aiderait l'Assemblée générale à « exercer comme il convient ses Recueil 1950*, p. 65, 71 ; Statut de la Carélie orientale, avis consultatif, 1923, C.P.J.I. série B n° 5, p. 29. La Cour a par exemple indiqué qu'il pouvait y avoir des « raisons décisives » de refuser de donner un avis consultatif lorsque cet avis « aurait pour effet de tourner le principe selon lequel un État n'est pas tenu de soumettre un différend au règlement judiciaire s'il n'est pas consentant ». Sahara occidental, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 1975, p. 25, par. 33 ; voir également infra, note 66.

⁴⁴ En répondant à une demande d'avis consultatif, la Cour garde le pouvoir discrétionnaire d'élargir, d'interpréter ou de reformuler les questions qui lui sont posées, notamment dans le but de dégager les principes et règles applicables et existants. Conformité au droit international de la déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance relative au Kosovo, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 2010 (II), p. 423, par. 50 (notant que la Cour peut redéfinir la portée et le sens des questions qui lui sont présentées dans les cas suivants : 1) lorsque la question n'est pas correctement formulée, 2) lorsque la Cour constate, en examinant le contexte de la demande, que celle-ci ne met pas en évidence les « points de droit ... véritablement ... en jeu », ou 3) lorsque la question posée est peu claire ou vague). La Cour a maintes fois exercé ce pouvoir discrétionnaire lorsqu'elle y a été amenée par les faits de l'espèce, le fond ou le libellé d'une résolution de saisine. Voir, par exemple, Demande de réformation du jugement n° 273 du Tribunal administratif des Nations Unies, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 1982, p. 348, par. 46 (la Cour y clarifiant une question de saisine vague ou ambiguë) ; Interprétation de l'accord du 25 mars 1951 entre l'OMS et l'Égypte, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 2019 (I), opinion dissidente de la juge Donoghue, p. 266, par. 22 (« La Cour aurait pu choisir d'exercer son pouvoir discrétionnaire en donnant une réponse plus limitée à la demande (qu'elle aurait pu reformuler dans ce but). ... L'Assemblée générale aurait pu bénéficier de cette réponse juridique sans que l'intégrité judiciaire de la Cour ne soit compromise. ») fonctions »⁴⁵. Elle a jugé que, pour rester fidèle à son caractère judiciaire, elle devait d'abord s'assurer de la signification de la question présentée et en mesurer toute la portée dans la situation de fait et de droit où il convenait de l'examiner⁴⁶.

3.3. Dans le présent chapitre est exposé le fait que ces importantes considérations énoncées par la Cour doivent la conduire à examiner la résolution par laquelle elle a été saisie en respectant le cadre établi exposé au chapitre II.

3.4. La section A explique pourquoi la Cour devrait adopter, en l'espèce, la méthode qu'elle a déjà employée dans la procédure consultative sur l'édification d'un mur pour répondre à la précédente demande d'avis présentée par l'Assemblée générale au sujet du conflit israélo-palestinien, afin de ne pas perturber le cadre de négociation existant. Dans la section B est exposée en détail la manière dont les questions posées en l'espèce mettent en jeu le principe du consentement au règlement judiciaire, et ce, bien davantage que dans la procédure sur l'édification d'un mur, car elles invitent la Cour à examiner des questions qui constituent l'objet même du différend et portent sur des points dont le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale ont maintes fois reconnu qu'ils devaient être réglés par voir de négociations directes entre les parties.

A. Le respect manifesté par la Cour, dans la procédure sur l'édification d'un mur, pour le rôle joué par le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale dans le règlement du différend israélo-palestinien et pour le cadre de négociation établi reste de mise

3.5. La relation entre la Cour et les autres organes principaux de l'ONU a été décrite comme étant une relation de « coordination et [de] coopération fonctionnelle en vue d'atteindre les objectifs communs de l'Organisation »⁴⁷. À cet égard, dans l'exercice de sa compétence tant contentieuse que consultative, la Cour s'attache à tenir compte des pouvoirs respectifs des organes politiques principaux en ce qui concerne toute question relevant de la paix et de la sécurité internationales⁴⁸. Comme l'a affirmé le juge Azevedo dans l'avis consultatif sur l'Interprétation des traités de paix, « la Cour, désignée comme organe principal et ainsi plus dans l'engrenage de l'O.N.U., doit faire de son mieux pour collaborer avec les autres organes en vue d'atteindre les buts et principes visés »⁴⁹.

« D'une façon générale, il est hors de doute que les relations mutuelles entre les organes principaux doivent être fondées sur le principe général que ces organes doivent coopérer en vue de réaliser les objectifs de l'Organisation (sous réserve de la responsabilité principale du Conseil de sécurité dans le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales).

3.6. La Cour a reconnu à juste titre que, en exerçant sa compétence consultative, son rôle consistait à prêter assistance aux autres organes intéressés de l'ONU dans l'accomplissement de leurs tâches⁵⁰, tout en respectant les responsabilités et décisions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale sur les questions de paix et de sécurité et en s'efforçant d'éviter un résultat qui pourrait compromettre ces décisions ou les priver d'effet⁵¹. Il s'ensuit que, en se penchant sur les questions formulées dans la résolution 77/247, elle peut et doit exercer son pouvoir discrétionnaire en formulant tout avis qu'elle pourrait donner de sorte à ne pas invalider ou compromettre le cadre établi dont le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale ont jugé qu'il constituait la meilleure et unique voie à suivre pour parvenir à une paix durable. À cet égard, l'approche adoptée par la Cour dans son avis consultatif sur l'édification d'un mur est instructive.

3.7. Dans la procédure sur l'édification d'un mur, la Cour a dû examiner l'opportunité de donner un avis à l'Assemblée générale sur certains aspects du différend israélo-palestinien nés d'un acte particulier, à savoir la construction par Israël d'une barrière de séparation. Elle a pris soin de préciser que la question posée par l'Assemblée générale était « limitée aux conséquences juridiques de la construction du mur »⁵² et s'est attachée à ne pas fragiliser le cadre de négociation établi et confirmé par les résolutions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale. La Cour a bien veillé à ne pas donner un avis qui aurait semblé dicter l'issue des questions liées au statut définitif sur lesquelles les parties étaient convenues de négocier, n'examinant « d'autres éléments que dans la mesure où ceux-ci [étaient] nécessaires aux fins de l'examen de cette question » et faisant observer que « seule la mise en œuvre de bonne foi de toutes les résolutions pertinentes du Conseil de sécurité, en particulier les résolutions 242 (1967) et 338 (1973) » pouvait permettre de mettre un terme au conflit envisagé plus globalement⁵³.

3.8. Dans ladite procédure, la Cour a soigneusement pris en considération le rôle de l'ONU à l'égard du conflit israélo-palestinien. Elle a notamment recherché si elle avait été dûment saisie de la question au regard de la résolution 1515 (2003) du Conseil de sécurité, texte alors récemment adopté dans lequel avait été approuvé un plan précis visant à parvenir à un règlement négocié du conflit sur la base du cadre de négociation établi. Elle a mentionné la responsabilité de l'ONU à l'égard des questions concernant le maintien de la paix et de la sécurité internationales, précisant

Cette approche ouvre la voie à une conception fonctionnelle de la tâche que remplit la Cour en sa qualité d'organe principal de l'ONU. Selon cette conception, sous réserve de certaines considérations juridiques primordiales (concernant notamment l'opportunité judiciaire), la Cour, en exerçant sa fonction judiciaire consistant à régler des différends (paragraphe 1 de l'article 38 du Statut) ou en donnant des avis consultatifs (article 96 de la Charte et paragraphe 1 de l'article 65 du Statut), doit coopérer à la réalisation des buts de l'Organisation et s'efforcer de donner effet aux décisions des principaux organes de celle-ci, et non de parvenir à des conclusions qui les rendraient sans effet. » que, « [d]ans le cadre institutionnel de l’Organisation, cette responsabilité s’[éta]it concrétisée par l’adoption de nombreuses résolutions du Conseil de sécurité et de l’Assemblée générale »⁵⁴ relatives au conflit.

3.9. Plus précisément, la Cour a reconnu que « [l]a “feuille de route” approuvée par la résolution 1515 (2003) du Conseil de sécurité constitua[it] l’effort le plus récent en vue de provoquer des négociations à cette fin »⁵⁵, et appelé l’attention de l’Assemblée générale sur « la nécessité d’encourager ces efforts en vue d’aboutir le plus tôt possible, sur la base du droit international, à une solution négociée des problèmes pendus et à la constitution d’un État palestinien vivant côté à côté avec Israël et ses autres voisins, et d’assurer à chacun dans la région paix et sécurité »⁵⁶.

3.10. Cette reconnaissance par la Cour des responsabilités des autres organes principaux de l’ONU à l’égard du conflit cadre avec le fait qu’elle a, dans d’autres contextes, souligné la nécessité de faire preuve de prudence en traitant de questions liées aux domaines de compétence des différentes entités de l’Organisation⁵⁷. Une telle approche s’impose d’autant plus en ce qui concerne les questions dont est aujourd’hui saisie la Cour.

3.11. Dans la procédure sur l’édification d’un mur, la Cour a constaté que c’est par des résolutions du Conseil de sécurité et de l’Assemblée générale que l’ONU avait défini son intérêt à l’égard du conflit israélo-palestinien. Ces mêmes résolutions, dont beaucoup continuent à ce jour d’être adoptées tous les ans ou semestres par l’Assemblée générale — la résolution par laquelle la Cour a été saisie en l’espèce en étant d’ailleurs un exemple —, ont confirmé à maintes reprises l’idée selon laquelle le différend ne pouvait être réglé que par une négociation fondée sur le principe de « l’échange de territoires contre la paix » énoncé pour la première fois dans les résolutions 242 et 338 du Conseil de sécurité, et dans le cadre établi à cet effet. Ces résolutions soulignent que les parties au conflit « doivent … pleinement respect[er] » le cadre établi pour régler leurs différends⁵⁸. Le fait qu’elles aient élaboré ce cadre et y aient apporté un soutien continu en tant que moyen de résoudre les questions liées au statut permanent, dont les frontières et les arrangements de sécurité, est crucial non seulement pour définir l'intérêt de l'Organisation à cet égard, mais aussi pour comprendre la saisine elle-même et la portée appropriée de l'examen de la Cour⁵⁹.

3.12. Enfin, dans la procédure sur l'édification d'un mur, la Cour a conclu qu'il était difficile de savoir quelle influence son avis aurait sur les négociations, y compris celles auxquelles invitait la résolution 1515 du Conseil de sécurité ; aussi n'a-t-elle pas considéré ce facteur comme une raison décisive de refuser d'exercer sa compétence⁶⁰. Il est loin d'en être de même en l'espèce, où les questions posées sont fondamentalement différentes, tant par leur nature que par leur portée. Contrairement à la question bien circonscrite à laquelle la Cour était appelée à répondre dans la procédure sur l'édification d'un mur, les questions soumises en l'espèce risquent d'entraîner des répercussions considérables sur des points qui sont au cœur même des négociations. Certains chantres de cette saisine sont allés jusqu'à dire qu'il était soumis à la Cour « la question de la Palestine dans son intégralité », laissant en réalité entendre que la Cour devait se prononcer définitivement sur tous les aspects du conflit israélo-palestinien⁶¹.

3.13. Il ne fait aucun doute que les questions soulevées en l'espèce pourraient, à défaut d'un examen minutieux et d'un respect scrupuleux du cadre approuvé par le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale et adopté par les parties au différend, donner lieu à un avis de très large portée. La première question interroge la Cour sur les conséquences juridiques de trois grandes catégories d'actes allégués : 1) la « violation ... par Israël du droit du peuple palestinien à l'autodétermination » ; 2) « [l']occupation, [l']colonisation et [l']annexion prolongées [par Israël] du territoire palestinien occupé depuis 1967 » ; et 3) les « lois et mesures discriminatoires connexes ». La seconde question demande à la Cour de se prononcer sur le « statut juridique » de l'occupation israélienne in toto, y compris en ce qui concerne les conséquences juridiques qui en découlent pour l'ONU et pour les États tiers. Considérées conjointement, ces questions — avec le caractère préemptoire et partial de leur formulation — peuvent aisément être lues comme tendant à obtenir un avis sur les questions mêmes dont l'Assemblée générale et le Conseil de sécurité n'ont eu de cesse de souligner qu'elles devaient être réglées par voie de négociations directes entre les parties.

3.14. Or, là encore, la résolution 77/247 de l'Assemblée générale réaffirme que le cadre établi « doi[t] être pleinement respecté[] » pour que les parties au conflit puissent régler leur différend. Cela place donc la Cour dans la situation peu enviable de devoir tenter de répondre à des questions dont la portée peut être importante sans mettre à mal le cadre de négociation établi auquel l'Assemblée générale elle-même s'est référée en sollicitant le présent avis consultatif.

3.15. Dès le moment où elle les a examinées, l'Assemblée générale s'est inquiétée de ce que les questions posées elles-mêmes puissent donner à penser que la Cour était invitée à donner un avis dépassant le cadre établi. Ainsi que cela est indiqué dans le chapitre II, la résolution 77/247 a recueilli 60 voix de moins que la précédente, la résolution 75/98, qui ne contenait pas les questions adressées à la Cour⁶². Pendant les travaux de la Quatrième Commission et les séances plénières de l'Assemblée générale, des États ont dit craindre de voir la demande d'avis consultatif entraver, plutôt que de faciliter, le règlement du conflit israélo-palestinien et ne pas servir l'objectif d'une reprise du dialogue entre les parties⁶³. Certains ont estimé n'avoir pas été avisés suffisamment à l'avance de ce que la demande d'avis consultatif avait été ajoutée à la résolution et que les concertations et débats préalables à ce sujet avaient été insuffisants⁶⁴. Les États-Unis ne sont donc pas le seul État Membre de l'Organisation à exprimer des réserves sur la partie de la résolution consacrée à la saisine de la Cour et, en particulier, les effets négatifs que cela pourrait avoir sur la perspective de futures négociations israélo-palestiniennes.

3.16. Le traitement par la Cour de la question posée dans la procédure sur l'édification d'un mur peut éclairer la manière dont elle devrait répondre à celles qui sont contenues dans la résolution 77/247⁶⁵. À l'époque, la Cour avait recherché si certaines violations du droit international avaient été commises et quelles en étaient les conséquences juridiques, telles que l'obligation pour Israël de mettre fin au comportement ayant entraîné les violations en cause. Ce faisant, elle avait toutefois procédé d'une manière qui ne compromettait ou n'entraînait pas le cadre de négociation existant et son principe de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix ». En l'espèce, il lui faudra également accorder une attention particulière aux fonctions exercées par le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale dans le traitement du conflit et s'efforcer d'ajuster son avis de façon à préserver le cadre établi, sans porter atteinte à la capacité des parties de négocier dans ce cadre sur les questions qui sont au cœur du différend, telles que les frontières et les arrangements de sécurité.

3.17. Si la Cour devait s'écarte de cette approche, le risque serait grand que, plutôt que de faciliter les efforts déployés par l'ONU pour que les parties reprennent les négociations et respectent pleinement le cadre établi, son avis ne préjuge de l'issue desdites négociations ou donne malencontreusement à entendre aux parties qu'il est inutile de négocier sur les éléments interdépendants du principe de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix », pourtant approuvé et encouragé de si longue date par le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale. Un tel avis serait en contradiction avec les résolutions pertinentes de l'ONU et les travaux du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale, et n'aiderait donc pas celle-ci dans l'exercice de ses fonctions.

Même des États ayant voté en faveur de la résolution ont relevé que la décision de demander un avis consultatif n'avait pas été étudiée de façon approfondie. Voir, par exemple, Nations Unies, Documents officiels de l'Assemblée générale, soixante-dix-septième session, 56^e séance plénière, 30 décembre 2022, doc. ⁶⁵ Il convient de noter à cet égard que la Cour, dans cette procédure, était parvenue à des conclusions sur les conséquences des activités de colonisation, d'actions modifiant la composition démographique, le caractère et le statut des territoires palestiniens occupés — y compris Jérusalem-Est —, et de politiques et pratiques faisant obstacle à l'exercice du droit palestinien à l'autodétermination. La Cour a appelé à mettre fin à toutes les violations de cet ordre qu'elle avait constatées et, le cas échéant, à réparer les dommages causés. Voir l'avis sur l'édification d'un mur, p. 184, par. 120-122 ; p. 201-202, par. 163.

B. Le fait de dépasser le cadre de négociation établi risquerait de porter atteinte au principe du consentement

3.18. La Cour a toujours jugé que le fait qu'un avis ait « pour effet de tourner le principe selon lequel un État n'est pas tenu de soumettre un différend au règlement judiciaire s'il n'est pas consentant »⁶⁶ entraînait dans la catégorie des « raisons décisives » pour ne pas répondre à la demande. Dans la procédure sur l'édification d'un mur, elle a rejeté l'argument selon lequel son avis sur la question plus restreinte qui lui était alors posée aurait un tel effet, étayant cette position en se référant à la responsabilité de l'ONU à l'égard des questions relatives à la paix et à la sécurité internationales, responsabilité qui « s'est concrétisée par l'adoption de nombreuses résolutions du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale » concernant la paix au Moyen-Orient⁶⁷.

3.19. En l'espèce, en revanche, les questions de l'Assemblée sont formulées de façon à couvrir un large spectre de problèmes touchant les différends qui sont au cœur du conflit israélo-palestinien, y compris le statut du territoire en cause⁶⁸. Or, non seulement aucun consentement n'a été recueilli aux fins d'un règlement judiciaire de ces problèmes par la Cour, mais les questions posées invitent celle-ci à apprécier les actes allégués d'une seule partie au différend, sans se prononcer sur les actes ou omissions de l'Autorité [nationale] palestinienne, de l'Organisation de libération de la Palestine ou d'autres entités⁶⁹. De surcroît, ainsi que cela a déjà été indiqué, tant le Conseil de sécurité que l'Assemblée générale n'ont cessé d'affirmer que, pour parvenir à une paix durable, les questions liées au statut permanent que recouvre le différend doivent être réglées par voie de négociations directes.

3.20. Comme cela vient d'être rappelé, la Cour, dans la procédure sur l'édification d'un mur, a estimé que l'effet que pourrait avoir son avis sur le cadre de négociation n'était pas assez évident pour être considéré comme un facteur décisif devant l'amener à se poser la question de l'opportunité d'exercer sa compétence consultative. Une telle conclusion ne serait pas plausible en l'espèce, où les questions posées invitent à donner un avis qui reviendrait, en substance, à statuer sur l'objet même ⁶⁶ Sahara occidental, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 1975, p. 25, par. 33 ; voir également la procédure sur l'édification d'un mur, p. 136, par. 14 ; ibid., opinion individuelle du juge Owada, p. 265, par. 13 (soulignant que, même si la demande de l'Assemblée générale ne vise pas à saisir la Cour d'un différend juridique, il n'en reste pas moins que la réponse apportée à cette demande serait incompatible avec la fonction judiciaire de la Cour si elle « rev[enait] ... à statuer sur l'objet même du différend bilatéral ») ; affaire de l'*Or monétaire pris à Rome en 1943 (Italie c. ⁶⁸ De surcroît, à la différence de la question posée dans la procédure sur l'édification d'un mur, les questions formulées en l'espèce sont rédigées de façon à établir les conclusions mêmes au sujet desquelles l'avis est sollicité. Or, ainsi que l'a expliqué la Cour dans la procédure au sujet du Kosovo, lorsqu'un point reste contesté et pourrait avoir une incidence sur la réponse qui serait donnée à la question juridique dont est saisie la Cour, « [i]ll serait incompatible avec le bon exercice de sa fonction judiciaire que la Cour considère ce point comme ayant été tranché par l'Assemblée générale ». Conformité au droit international de la déclaration unilatérale d'indépendance relative au Kosovo, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 2010 (II), p. 424, par. 52. Les deux questions en cause en l'espèce font intervenir ce principe. Nations Unies, Assemblée générale, résolution 77/247 du 30 décembre 2022, « Pratiques israéliennes affectant les droits humains du peuple palestinien dans le Territoire palestinien occupé, y compris Jérusalem-Est », par. 18, al. a), doc. A/RES/77/247 [dossier, pièce n° 3] (où il est fait référence à la « violation persistante » par Israël du droit des Palestiniens à l'autodétermination et indiqué qu'Israël prend diverses mesures « visant à modifier » des questions liées au statut définitif, comme Jérusalem, et qu'il a adopté « des lois et mesures discriminatoires connexes ») ; ibid., par. 18, al. b) (où il est demandé à la Cour de se prononcer sur le statut juridique de l'occupation et sur les conséquences juridiques qui en découlent sur la base des postulats factuels énoncés dans la première question).

des négociations. Un avis de la Cour qui semblerait régler, ou réglerait effectivement, toute question liée au statut permanent, ne tiendrait pas compte de la distribution intérimaire des pouvoirs et des responsabilités convenue par les parties ou indiquerait que l'une des conséquences juridiques des actes d'Israël l'oblige à se retirer des territoires occupés sans qu'ait été réalisée la paix globale, juste et durable par « l'échange de territoires contre la paix », pourrait contrevénir au cadre établi et risquerait fort de le supplanter. Il pourrait nuire à la capacité des parties de négocier un règlement de leur différend, notamment en compliquant de manière involontaire les efforts déployés pour parvenir à une désescalade des tensions croissantes en Cisjordanie, tels que les rencontres organisées selon le format encore balbutiant d'Aqaba-Charm El-Cheikh, en poussant les parties à camper sur leurs positions et en les divisant davantage. Pareil avis pourrait aussi encourager certains éléments de chaque côté à se livrer à des actes qui éloigneraient encore la perspective d'une paix négociée juste et pérenne, au lieu d'œuvrer dans ce sens.

3.21. Le fait que la Cour doive veiller à ne pas empiéter sur l'objet même du différend sous-jacent ressort en outre de l'avis consultatif qu'elle a donné dans la procédure au sujet du Sahara occidental. La Cour y a indiqué que l'avis qu'elle donnerait à l'Assemblée générale sur la question des droits du Maroc sur le Sahara occidental à l'époque de la colonisation serait sans effet sur les droits détenus par l'Espagne en tant que puissance administrante du territoire⁷⁰. Elle a aussi précisé que l'Assemblée générale ne l'avait pas consultée afin d'« exercer ... ses pouvoirs et ses fonctions en vue de régler pacifiquement ce différend ou cette controverse »⁷¹.

3.22. Répondre aux questions posées en l'espèce en donnant un avis qui reviendrait, en pratique, à rendre superflu le moyen prescrit par le Conseil de sécurité et approuvé par l'Assemblée générale pour régler le différend — à savoir les négociations directes — ferait jouer à la Cour le rôle de mécanisme de règlement du différend et non d'organe consultatif. Bien qu'il s'agisse d'un rôle qu'elle est nécessairement amenée à jouer dans le cadre des procédures contentieuses fondées sur le consentement des parties, la Cour a maintes fois souligné que sa compétence consultative était distincte et ne constituait pas le moyen approprié pour régler un différend⁷². Elle devrait garder cette distinction à l'esprit et ne pas céder à ceux qui cherchent à éviter ou à compromettre le recours à des négociations directes en lui demandant de trancher des questions dont les parties, comme le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale, ont considéré qu'elles étaient au cœur du différend et ne pouvaient être résolues que par la voie de telles négociations. Il est essentiel que tout soit fait pour préserver le cadre établi et créer les conditions d'une reprise des négociations directes entre les parties, qui permettraient à celles-ci de régler toutes les questions liées au statut permanent. Il est également crucial d'encourager les parties à s'abstenir de toutes actions unilatérales qui iraient à l'encontre d'un retour à la table des négociations.

CHAPITRE IV

LA DEMANDE INVITE À PROCÉDER À UN EXAMEN DU CADRE ÉTABLI SUR LA BASE DE PRÉSOMPTIONS SANS FONDEMENT EN DROIT INTERNATIONAL

4.1. Ainsi que cela a été précisé, pour s’acquitter de ses obligations, la Cour « doit d’abord s’assurer de [l]a signification [de la question] et en mesurer toute la portée dans la situation de fait et de droit où il convient de l’examiner »⁷³.

4.2. La deuxième question de l’Assemblée générale repose sur un postulat erroné. Elle prie la Cour d’émettre un avis sur « [l’]incidence » que les politiques, pratiques et violations alléguées visées dans la première question, notamment l’occupation, la colonisation et l’annexion prolongées du territoire occupé « ont[] sur le statut juridique de l’occupation ». La réponse qui s’impose d’évidence est que le statut juridique de l’occupation en droit international humanitaire résulte du seul fait de l’occupation. Selon le droit international humanitaire, le statut juridique d’une occupation de guerre ne change pas en cas de prolongement de l’occupation ou de commission alléguée, par la puissance occupante, de violations du droit international humanitaire ou d’autres règles du droit international⁷⁴.

4.3. Conformément au droit international coutumier, qui trouve son expression à l’article 42 du règlement concernant les lois et coutumes de la guerre sur terre, annexé à la convention (IV) concernant les lois et coutumes de la guerre sur terre (ci-après le « règlement IV de La Haye »), un territoire est considéré comme occupé lorsqu’il se trouve placé de fait sous l’autorité de l’armée ennemie⁷⁵. L’occupation ne s’étend qu’aux territoires où cette autorité est établie et en mesure de s’exercer⁷⁶. Le fait de l’occupation est le fondement de l’exercice, par la puissance occupante, de son autorité — notamment au moyen d’une présence de sécurité sur le territoire occupé —, et de l’application, par cette puissance, d’un cadre juridique de droits et d’obligations auquel elle est tenue⁷⁷. Bien que l’occupation de guerre soit par nature provisoire, le droit international humanitaire continue de s’appliquer pendant toute la durée effective, quelle qu’elle soit, d’une occupation⁷⁸.

⁷³ Interprétation de l'accord du 25 mars 1951 entre l'OMS et l'Égypte, avis consultatif, C.I.J. Recueil 1980, p. 76, par. 10.

⁷⁴ Les États doivent se conformer au jus in bello — y compris le droit de l’occupation de guerre —, indépendamment des questions de savoir si un État peut être considéré comme étant l’agresseur ou si le recours initial à la force était licite selon le jus ad bellum. Dans une occupation faisant suite à une agression, le fait de l’occupation demeure reconnu selon le jus in bello et les droits et devoirs de la puissance occupante restent applicables.

Ouganda)*, arrêt, C.I.J. Recueil 2005, p. 229-230, par. 172.

⁷⁶ Activités armées sur le territoire du Congo (République démocratique du Congo c. Ouganda), arrêt, C.I.J. Recueil 2005, p. 229-230, par. 172.

⁷⁷ Voir ibid., p. 230, par. 173 (« En vue de parvenir à une conclusion sur la question de savoir si un État dont les forces militaires sont présentes sur le territoire d’un autre État du fait d’une intervention est une « puissance occupante » au sens où l’entend le jus in bello, la Cour examinera tout d’abord s’il existe des éléments de preuve suffisants démontrant que ladite autorité se trouvait effectivement établie et exercée dans les zones en question par l’État auteur de l’intervention. »)

⁷⁸ Des experts réunis par le Comité international de la Croix-Rouge n’ont pas été en mesure d’établir une quelconque limite qu’imposerait le droit international humanitaire à la durée d’une occupation. Voir T. Ferrero, Expert Meeting: Occupation and Other Forms of Administration of Foreign Territory, CICR, mars 2012, p. 72, (« [L]es participants s’accordent à dire que le droit international humanitaire ne fixe pas de limite à la durée d’une occupation. Il s’ensuit que ce droit n’empêche en rien une puissance occupante de s’engager dans une occupation à long terme et que, dans cette hypothèse, le droit de l’occupation demeure le cadre juridique applicable. »)

4.4. Dans la procédure sur l'édification d'un mur, la Cour a estimé qu'Israël avait enfreint certaines interdictions imposées aux puissances occupantes par le droit international humanitaire et qu'il devait, par conséquent, y mettre fin et fournir une indemnisation appropriée⁷⁹. Dans le même temps, elle a reconnu que le statut d'Israël en tant que puissance occupante s'était poursuivi pendant de nombreuses années et réaffirmé l'applicabilité de la convention de Genève relative à la protection des personnes civiles en temps de guerre (ci-après la « quatrième convention de Genève ») au territoire occupé depuis 1967⁸⁰.

4.5. Le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale ont déclaré que toute action visant à modifier le statut d'un territoire occupé était nulle et non avenue et ne pouvait avoir d'incidence sur le maintien de l'application de la quatrième convention de Genève⁸¹. Le droit de l'occupation prévoit en outre clairement que les personnes protégées se trouvant dans le territoire occupé continuent de bénéficier des protections qu'il accorde, quelles que soient les modifications juridiques qu'ait pu vouloir apporter la puissance occupante, et ce, jusqu'à ce que l'occupation prenne fin⁸².

4.6. Comme elle l'a fait dans son avis sur l'édification d'un mur, la Cour, dans l'hypothèse où elle répondrait à la seconde question, devrait rappeler que le droit de l'occupation continue de s'appliquer du seul fait de l'occupation. En tant que puissance occupante, Israël a d'importants droits et obligations au regard du droit international humanitaire qui continuent de s'appliquer, indépendamment des violations alléguées de ce droit ou d'autres règles de droit international⁸³. Ainsi, dans la mesure où la seconde question peut être interprétée comme l'invitant à déclarer que l'occupation israélienne a été frappée de nullité ou d'illicéité, la Cour devrait s'y refuser, au motif qu'une telle appréciation est sans fondement en droit international.

Le principal objectif de ce droit est de protéger des personnes prises dans un conflit, même s'il prend effectivement en compte les intérêts des parties belligérantes, entre lesquelles il n'opère aucune distinction. En particulier, une occupation résultant d'un recours licite à l'emploi de la force n'est pas distinguée, dans le jus in bello, de celle qui découle d'une agression. Cette dernière question est tranchée par l'application du jus ad bellum, le droit relatif à l'emploi de la force, qui permet d'attribuer la responsabilité d'actes dont l'occupation est le résultat. »)

CHAPITRE V

CONCLUSION : UNE PAIX JUSTE ET DURABLE EXIGE LA TENUE DE NÉGOCIATIONS DIRECTES ENTRE LES PARTIES

5.1. Il demeure crucial de déployer tous les efforts possibles pour créer les conditions nécessaires à une reprise par les parties de négociations directes leur permettant de traiter des questions liées au statut permanent, qui sont essentielles pour atteindre l'objectif de deux États vivant côté à côté dans la paix et la sécurité. Comme l'ont reconnu le Conseil de sécurité, l'Assemblée générale, la Cour et les parties elles-mêmes, ce n'est que par de telles négociations se tenant dans le cadre établi fondé sur le principe de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix » qu'il sera possible de parvenir à un règlement global, juste et durable du conflit. Dès lors, et compte tenu du contexte actuel, il est urgent que l'ONU, ses États Membres et les parties prennent des mesures pour créer les conditions requises à cette fin. Il est également crucial que l'avis de la Cour en l'espèce serve cet objectif et ne compromette pas involontairement le cadre établi, conformément aux intérêts du Conseil de sécurité et de l'Assemblée générale, aux fonctions qui leur sont propres et au principe fondamental du consentement au règlement judiciaire.

5.2. Le fait que des négociations directes sur le statut permanent n'aient pas lieu à l'heure actuelle entre les parties ne signifie pas qu'une solution négociée à deux États ne soit plus viable. Si l'escalade de la violence et l'existence d'une profonde défiance peuvent entraver le processus, des mesures pragmatiques peuvent toutefois encore être adoptées afin de créer les conditions requises pour une reprise des négociations nécessaires à l'instauration de la paix, de la sécurité et de la pleine réalisation de l'autodétermination palestinienne. Comme l'a souligné l'Assemblée générale dans sa résolution de décembre 2022 intitulée « Règlement pacifique de la question de Palestine », il est « urgent de déployer collectivement des efforts pour engager des négociations crédibles sur toutes les questions relatives au statut final dans le processus de paix au Moyen-Orient ... [L'Assemblée] demande une fois de plus aux parties de redoubler d'efforts, y compris par la voie de négociations constructives, avec l'appui de la communauté internationale, en vue de parvenir à un règlement juste, durable et global »⁸⁴.

5.3. Ces efforts recouvrent notamment les rencontres organisées selon le format d'Aqaba-Charm el-Cheikh, qui ont commencé cette année afin de parvenir à une désescalade des tensions et à un regain du dialogue politique entre les parties. Avec l'appui des États-Unis et des partenaires régionaux que sont l'Égypte et la Jordanie, Israéliens et Palestiniens se sont de nouveau engagés à respecter leurs précédents accords et ont exprimé leur intérêt à « consolider les bases de négociations directes entre [eux] en vue d'atteindre une paix globale, juste et durable »⁸⁵. Bien que les États-Unis aient conscience des préoccupations qui ont conduit l'Assemblée générale à solliciter le présent avis consultatif, ces rencontres et ce dialogue démontrent qu'un règlement négocié demeure d'actualité et peuvent servir à la communauté internationale pour jeter les bases d'une reprise des négociations, telle que préconisée par le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale. Les parties ont aussi, malgré les difficultés rencontrées et les désaccords affichés, continué d'entretenir des contacts qui confortent les principes auxquels elles ont souscrit dans les accords d'Oslo, notamment en ce qui concerne la coopération en matière de sécurité⁸⁶.

⁸⁵ Communiqué de Charm el-Cheikh, supra, note 7.

⁸⁶ Voir supra, note 35.

5.4. Ce nonobstant, pour faire avancer le processus, il est également fondamental que les parties respectent leurs engagements et accords et cessent d'entreprendre des actions unilatérales qui ne font qu'exacerber les tensions, éloigner la perspective de la solution à deux États et les détourner davantage de la paix. Parmi ces actions, on mentionnera le développement des colonies, la poursuite d'objectifs étatiques en dehors du cadre des négociations, la démolition d'habitations et l'incitation à des actes de violence ou leur glorification⁸⁷. Lorsque les Israéliens et les Palestiniens se livrent à de tels actes unilatéraux au lieu de mener des négociations selon le cadre établi, il s'ensuit une montée des violences et de la défiance qui dessert leurs intérêts respectifs. Cela dessert aussi les objectifs du cadre sans cesse soutenu par le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale. Les parties doivent au contraire mener des négociations directes, puisque ce n'est que par cette voie, dans le respect du cadre établi, qu'elles pourront parvenir à une paix durable conduisant à la création d'un État palestinien indépendant et viable qui vivrait en toute sécurité et sérénité aux côtés d'Israël, les deux populations pouvant jouir à part égale de la liberté et de la prospérité. Ainsi que l'a fait observer la Cour dans son avis sur l'édification d'un mur, il existe une « nécessité urgente que l'Organisation des Nations Unies dans son ensemble redouble ses efforts en vue de mettre rapidement un terme au conflit israélo-palestinien ... et d'établir ainsi une paix juste et durable dans la région »⁸⁸. En la présente espèce, la Cour devrait appuyer cette exhortation, qui n'a à ce jour rien perdu de sa justesse.

5.5. Alors que la Cour a, en 2004, donné un avis consultatif sur un aspect particulier du conflit israélo-palestinien, les questions étendues en même temps que partiales et conclusives formulées en l'espèce pourraient être interprétées comme l'invitant à régler les problèmes liés au statut permanent eux-mêmes — au sujet desquels les parties étaient convenues de négocier dans les accords d'Oslo — et à tirer des conclusions juridiques touchant au cœur du principe corrélé de « l'échange de territoires contre la paix », lequel sous-tend le cadre de négociation établi toujours approuvé et soutenu par l'ONU.

5.6. Afin de préserver l'intégrité de sa fonction judiciaire, la Cour devrait faire usage du pouvoir discrétionnaire qui est le sien en matière consultative en tenant dûment compte des responsabilités que le Conseil de sécurité et l'Assemblée générale ont exercées à l'égard de ce conflit au moyen d'un cadre de négociation, et en respectant le principe du consentement. Il est impératif que la Cour, même si elle se penche sur les conséquences juridiques des violations alléguées du droit international, veille à formuler son avis de sorte à préserver la capacité des parties de négocier les termes de la paix et d'une solution à deux États, conformément au cadre établi tel qu'il résulte des résolutions 242 et 338 du Conseil de sécurité, constamment appuyé par l'Assemblée générale et adopté dans les accords conclus entre les parties⁸⁹. Face à toute préoccupation quant à sa capacité de traiter les questions qui lui sont posées sans sortir du cadre de négociation établi, il est essentiel que la Cour exerce son pouvoir discrétionnaire en matière consultative afin de ne pas mettre ce cadre en péril.

⁸⁷ L'Assemblée générale a récemment demandé aux

« deux parties d'agir de façon responsable dans le respect du droit international et de leurs précédents accords et obligations, tant dans leurs politiques que dans leur action, afin d'inverser d'urgence, avec l'appui du Quatuor et d'autres parties intéressées, les tendances négatives, y compris toutes les mesures prises sur le terrain qui contreviennent au droit international, et de mettre en place les conditions nécessaires à la création d'un horizon politique crédible et à la promotion des efforts de paix ».

Nations Unies, Assemblée générale, résolution 77/25 du 30 novembre 2022, doc. A/RES/77/25, par. 5 [dossier, pièce n° 516] ; voir également ibid., par. 7 (« [s]ouligne qu'il importe, en particulier, de mettre immédiatement fin à toutes les activités d'implantation de colonies de peuplement, à la confiscation de terres et aux démolitions de maisons »).

5.7. Les États-Unis appellent respectueusement la Cour à faire montre de prudence en pesant la réponse qu'elle donnera à la demande de l'Assemblée générale. Si la Cour venait à rendre un avis qui recouvrirait « la question de la Palestine dans son intégralité »⁹⁰, comme d'aucuns ont pu l'avancer, ou préjugerait — ou semblerait trancher — des questions liées au statut permanent réservées aux négociations, telles que les frontières ou les arrangements de sécurité, cette décision ne contribuerait ni à atteindre les objectifs poursuivis par le cadre de négociation établi, ni à réunir les conditions favorables à une paix négociée, ni, en définitive, à servir les intérêts et fonctions de l'ONU. Il s'ensuit que les questions posées devraient être comprises comme une demande d'avis consultatif visant à faciliter l'exercice par l'Assemblée générale de son rôle et de ses fonctions en promouvant un règlement négocié du conflit, conformément au cadre établi. L'avis de la Cour devrait aider à atteindre cet objectif⁹¹.

Israel-PLO Recognition: Exchange of Letters between PM Rabin and Chairman Arafat

1. LETTER FROM YASSER ARAFAT TO PRIME MINISTER RABIN:

September 9, 1993

Yitzhak Rabin
Prime Minister of Israel

Mr. Prime Minister,

The signing of the Declaration of Principles marks a new era in the history of the Middle East. In firm conviction thereof, I would like to confirm the following PLO commitments:

The PLO recognizes the right of the State of Israel to exist in peace and security.

The PLO accepts United Nations Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338.

The PLO commits itself to the Middle East peace process, and to a peaceful resolution of the conflict between the two sides and declares that all outstanding issues relating to permanent status will be resolved through negotiations.

The PLO considers that the signing of the Declaration of Principles constitutes a historic event, inaugurating a new epoch of peaceful coexistence, free from violence and all other acts which endanger peace and stability. Accordingly, the PLO renounces the use of terrorism and other acts of violence and will assume responsibility over all PLO elements and personnel in order to assure their compliance, prevent violations and discipline violators.

In view of the promise of a new era and the signing of the Declaration of Principles and based on Palestinian acceptance of Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338, the PLO affirms that those articles of the Palestinian Covenant which deny Israel's right to exist, and the provisions of the Covenant which are inconsistent with the commitments of this letter are now inoperative and no longer valid. Consequently, the PLO undertakes to submit to the Palestinian National Council for formal approval the necessary changes in regard to the Palestinian Covenant.

Sincerely,

Yasser Arafat
Chairman
The Palestine Liberation Organization

2. LETTER FROM YASSER ARAFAT TO NORWEGIAN FOREIGN MINISTER:

September 9, 1993

His Excellency
Johan Jorgen Holst
Foreign Minister of Norway

Dear Minister Holst,

I would like to confirm to you that, upon the signing of the Declaration of Principles, the PLO encourages and calls upon the Palestinian people in the West Bank and Gaza Strip to take part in the steps leading to the normalization of life, rejecting violence and terrorism, contributing to peace and stability and participating actively in shaping reconstruction, economic development and cooperation.

Sincerely,

Yasser Arafat
Chairman
The Palestine Liberation Organization

3. LETTER FROM PRIME MINISTER RABIN TO YASSER ARAFAT:

Declaration of Principles on Interim
Self-Government Arrangements

The Government of the State of Israel and the PLO team (in the Jordanian-Palestinian delegation to the Middle East Peace Conference) (the "Palestinian Delegation"), representing the Palestinian people, agree that it is time to put an end to decades of confrontation and conflict, recognize their mutual legitimate and political rights, and strive to live in peaceful coexistence and mutual dignity and security and achieve a just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement and historic reconciliation through the agreed political process. Accordingly, the two sides agree to the following principles:

Article I

AIM OF THE NEGOTIATIONS

The aim of the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations within the current Middle East peace process is, among other things, to establish a Palestinian Interim Self-Government Authority, the elected Council (the "Council"), for the Palestinian people in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, for a transitional period not exceeding five years, leading to a permanent settlement based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973). It is understood that the interim arrangements are an integral part of the whole peace process and that the negotiations on the permanent status will lead to the implementation of Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973).

Article II

FRAMEWORK FOR THE INTERIM PERIOD

The agreed framework for the interim period is set forth in this Declaration of Principles.

Article III

ELECTIONS

1. In order that the Palestinian people in the West Bank and Gaza Strip may govern themselves according to democratic principles, direct, free and general political elections will be held for the Council under agreed supervision and international observation, while the Palestinian police will ensure public order.

2. An agreement will be concluded on the exact mode and conditions of the elections in accordance with the protocol attached as Annex I, with the goal of holding the elections not later than nine months after the entry into force of this Declaration of Principles.

3. These elections will constitute a significant interim preparatory step toward the realization of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people and their just requirements.

Article IV

Jurisdiction of the Council will cover West Bank and Gaza Strip territory, except for issues that will be negotiated in the permanent status negotiations. The two sides view the West Bank and the Gaza Strip as a single territorial unit, whose integrity will be preserved during the interim period.

Article V

TRANSITIONAL PERIOD AND PERMANENT STATUS NEGOTIATIONS

1. The five-year transitional period will begin upon the withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and Jericho area.

2. Permanent status negotiations will commence as soon as possible, but not later than the beginning of the third year of the interim period, between the Government of Israel and the Palestinian people's representatives.

3. It is understood that these negotiations shall cover remaining issues, including: Jerusalem, refugees, settlements, security arrangements, borders, relations and cooperation with other neighbours, and other issues of common interest.

4. The two parties agree that the outcome of the permanent status negotiations should not be prejudiced or preempted by agreements reached for the interim period.

Article VI

PREPARATORY TRANSFER OF POWERS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

1. Upon the entry into force of this Declaration of Principles and the withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and the Jericho area, a transfer of authority from the Israeli military government and its Civil Administration to the authorized Palestinians for this task, as detailed herein, will commence. This transfer of authority will be of a preparatory nature until the inauguration of the Council.

2. Immediately after the entry into force of this Declaration of Principles and the withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and Jericho area, with the view to promoting economic development in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, authority will be transferred to the Palestinians in the following spheres: education and culture, health, social welfare, direct taxation and tourism.
