

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
HOUSTON DIVISION

A & R ENGINEERING AND TESTING, INC.,

Plaintiff,

vs.

CITY OF HOUSTON; and

KEN PAXTON, in his official capacity as Attorney General of Texas,

Defendants.

Case No. 4:21-cv-03577

A & R ENGINEERING’S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

The lion’s share of Texas’s Opposition to the Motion for a Preliminary Injunction (Section II) is a carbon copy of its Motion to Dismiss. In order to avoid duplicative briefing, A&R will not rehash the arguments made in its Opposition to that Motion to Dismiss but will instead respond to the few points that are unique to Texas’s Opposition.

Like the rest of the Motion for a Preliminary Injunction, Texas’s arguments against a Preliminary Injunction ignore the well-thought-out decisions granting preliminary injunctions against the same or similar laws in Amawi v. Pflugerville Indep. Sch. Dist., 373 F. Supp. 3d 717 (W.D. Tex. 2019), Koontz v. Watson, 283 F. Supp. 3d 1007 (D. Kan. 2018), and Jordahl v. Brnovich, 336 F. Supp. 3d 1016 (D. Ariz. 2018). Just as these arguments were unpersuasive in those cases, Texas’s arguments are unpersuasive here: A facial challenge is appropriate in First Amendment cases like this where the law is invalid on its face. A&R’s injury is irreparable both because (1) despite Texas’s claim to the contrary, that injury is a First Amendment injury, and (2) even if it were just a monetary injury, it cannot be repaired in damages. And the balance of the equities weighs heavily in favor of an injunction because neither Texas nor the public has any legitimate interest in the enforcement of an unconstitutional law.

ARGUMENT

I. A facial challenge is appropriate.

A facial challenge is appropriate, where, like here, no set of circumstances exist where the law in question would be constitutional. Washington State Grange v. Washington State Republican Party, 552 U.S. 442, 449 (2008). Because the Anti-BDS Law prohibits political boycotts and related support for such boycotts—clearly protected political speech—the law is facially unconstitutional. See Motion for a Preliminary Injunction at 5-11; Opposition to Motion to Dismiss §§ I-II. A facial challenge is also appropriate, as here, when a statute is impermissibly vague. City of Chicago v. Morales, 527 U.S. 41, 42 (1999); see also Motion for Preliminary Injunction at 5-11; Motion to Dismiss Opposition § III.

Hersh v. U.S. ex rel. Mukasey, 553 F.3d 743, 762 (5th Cir. 2008), does not block a facial challenge. In Hersh, the constitutional challenge at issue was overbreadth, which is similar to but not precisely the same as vagueness. Id. The Court found the law was not substantially overbroad, and so the facial challenge was rejected on the merits. Id. Here, the law is substantially overbroad, see Opposition to Motion to Dismiss at § III, as well as vague, id., so the facial challenge should succeed.

II. A&R's harm is irreparable.

Texas claims that A&R's harm is merely monetary damages, which it goes on to claim are reparable. Neither part of its argument is correct.

First, the fact that A&R is also suffering monetary harm does not change the fact that A&R's injury is a First Amendment one. "The loss of First Amendment freedoms, for even minimal periods of time, unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury." Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373 (1976); Opulent Life Church v. City of Holly Springs, 697 F.3d 279, 295 (5th Cir. 2012). As Koontz stated, Texas's argument that potential economic reimbursement can remedy the harm was "discredited" in Elrod itself as an argument the First Amendment cannot "abide." Koontz, 283 F. Supp. 3d 1007 at 1025. As Koontz further explained: "Plaintiff's harm stems not from her decision to refuse to sign the certification, but rather from the plainly unconstitutional choice the Kansas Law forces plaintiff to make: She either can contract with the state or she can support a boycott of Israel. Her harm is ongoing because the Kansas Law is currently chilling plaintiff's and other putative state contractors' speech rights." Id. at 1026. So too here.

Second, A&R cannot rely on money damages to satisfy any injury in any event. The City of Houston will likely argue that, under Monell v. Department of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658 (1978), because it was not responsible for the Anti-BDS Law, it cannot be held liable for the First Amendment violation. See Houston's Response to Preliminary Injunction. "The Fifth Circuit has long recognized that simply following the mandatory dictates of state law cannot form a predicate for Monell liability." West v. Congemi, 28 F. Supp. 2d 385, 394 (E.D. La. 1998) (citing Bigford v. Taylor, 834 F.2d 1213, 1222 (5th Cir.1988)). The Texas legislature, of course, has absolute immunity. Tenney v. Brandhove, 341 U.S. 367 (1951); Dombrowski v. Eastland, 387 U.S. 82, 85 (1967). And even if the Texas Attorney General was sufficiently tied to the actions in question to be liable for money damages under Section 1983, the Attorney General may be shielded by qualified immunity for the time being. Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.

Supp. 3d ----, 2021 WL 2068261, at *9-10 (N.D. Ga. May 21, 2021) (attached hereto as Exhibit 1.

Immunity defenses to a monetary claim constitute irreparable injury as a matter of law. Am. Trucking Associations, Inc. v. Gray, 483 U.S. 1306, 1309 (1987). See generally Koontz, 283 F. Supp. 3d 1007 at 1025. So even the monetary loss A&R would suffer absent an injunction may be irreparable here.

III. The equities favor a preliminary injunction.

As A&R explained in its Motion for a Preliminary Injunction, when a law violates the First Amendment, the equities strongly favor a preliminary injunction. See Motion for a Preliminary Injunction at 15. Texas’s arguments here rely entirely on its incorrect assumption that the law is constitutional in significant aspects. This is false. Texas has no interest in enforcing an unconstitutional law. Planned Parenthood of Gulf Coast, Inc. v. Gee, 862 F.3d 445, 471 (5th Cir. 2017); see also Amawi, 373 F. Supp. 3d at 758 (stating same); Jordahl, 356 F. Supp. 3d at 1050 (“Defendants will experience little to no hardship by enjoining the enforcement of a law that does nothing to further any economic state interest and infringes on First Amendment protections.”).

CONCLUSION

The Anti-BDS Law in question is designed, at its heart, not to regulate commercial actions, but to punish a movement. That should be apparent from the face of the law and by the statement of the legislator who introduced the law, see Verified Complaint ¶ 25. And it is the view of the Israeli government itself. As former Prime Minister Netanyahu stated in 2020, “we have promoted laws in most US states, which determine that strong action is to be taken against whoever tries to boycott Israel.” See Abbas Reply Declaration Exhibit A.¹ Prime Minister Netanyahu went on to state that includes those that “tr[y] to disparage Israel.” Israeli Ambassador to the United States stated earlier this year in an open letter to American Governors that “American companies with radical ideological agendas cannot be allowed to go against the policy of the United States and act against normalization and peace.” See Abbas Reply Declaration Exhibit B.²

There is, of course, nothing unlawful with American states partnering with foreign countries, including Israel. And foreign countries may lobby for the enactment and enforcement of laws just like anyone else. But Texas—and this Court—must draw the line at the enactment and enforcement of laws that violate American citizens’ constitutional rights, including the sacred right to engage in political boycotts that the Supreme Court enshrined in Claiborne Hardware.

The Court should grant the Motion for a Preliminary Injunction.

Dated: December 13, 2021

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN T. FLOYD LAW FIRM

John T. Floyd (TX Bar No. 00790700)
jfloyd@johntfloyd.com
Christopher M. Choate (TX Bar No. 24045655)
choate@johntfloyd.com
4900 Woodway Dr., Ste. 725
Houston, TX 77056
Phone: (713) 224-0101
Fax: (713) 237-1511

¹ Also available at <https://twitter.com/israelipm/status/1227660066700042242>.

² Also available at <https://twitter.com/giladerdan1/status/1417541212316315652>.

CAIR LEGAL DEFENSE FUND

Lena F. Masri (D.C. Bar No. 1000019) α
lmasri@cair.com

Gadeir I. Abbas (VA Bar No. 81161) #*
gabbas@cair.com

Justin Sadowsky (D.C. Bar No. 977642)
jsadowsky@cair.com

453 New Jersey Ave., SE

Washington, DC 20003

Phone: (202) 742-6420

Fax: (202) 488-0833

α SDTX admission application forthcoming

Admitted Pro Hac Vice

* Licensed in VA, not in D.C.

Practice limited to federal matters

Exhibit 1

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d ---- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

2021 WL 2068261

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.
United States District Court, N.D. Georgia, Atlanta Division.

Abby MARTIN, Los Angeles County, California, Plaintiff, v.

Steve WRIGLEY, Chancellor for the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia, in his Official Capacity; Kyle Marrero, President of Georgia Southern University, in his Official Capacity; Bonnie Overstreet, Conference Services Manager for Georgia Southern University, in her Individual Capacity; Michel Blitch, Conference Services Coordinator for Georgia Southern University, in her Individual Capacity; and Sandra Lensch, Conference Services Specialist for Georgia Southern University, in her Individual Capacity, Defendants.

CIVIL ACTION FILE NO. 1:20-CV-596-MHC

|
Signed 05/21/2021

Synopsis

Background: Journalist filed § 1983 action alleging that university officials prevented her from giving speech at university based on Georgia statute prohibiting state from entering into contracts with individuals engaged in boycott of Israel, in violation of her rights to freedom of speech, freedom of association, and due process. Defendants moved to dismiss.

Holdings: The District Court, Mark H. Cohen, J., held that:

^[1] statute implicated contractors' First Amendment free speech rights;

^[2] statute was content-based;

^[3] journalist pled plausible First Amendment free speech claim

^[4] journalist pled plausible First Amendment compelled speech claim;

^[5] journalist pled plausible void for vagueness claim; and

^[6] officials were entitled to qualified immunity.

Motion granted in part and denied in part.

Procedural Posture(s): Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim.

West Headnotes (22)

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d ---- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

[1] Civil Rights ➡ Substantive or procedural rights

Section 1983 itself creates no substantive rights; it merely provides remedy for deprivations of federal rights established elsewhere.  42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

[2] Civil Rights ➡ Nature and elements of civil actions

To sustain cause of action based on § 1983, litigant must establish that: (1) she suffered deprivation of right, privilege, or immunity protected by United States Constitution or federal law, and (2) act or omission causing deprivation was committed by person acting under color of state law.  42 U.S.C.A. § 1983.

[3] Constitutional Law ➡ Fourteenth Amendment in generalConstitutional Law ➡ Government contractors

Principle that state government employment cannot be conditioned on taking oaths that impinge on rights guaranteed by First and Fourteenth Amendments applies to those contracting with government, absent special government interest. U.S. Const. Amends. 1, 14.

[4] Constitutional Law ➡ Particular Issues and Applications in General

Right of states to regulate economic activity cannot justify complete prohibition against nonviolent, politically motivated boycott designed to force governmental change and effectuate free speech rights guaranteed by Constitution itself. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

[5] Constitutional Law ➡ Government ContractsPublic Contracts ➡ Conditions and restrictions on biddersStates ➡ Preferences; conditions and restrictions on bidders

Georgia statute prohibiting state from entering into contract with individual or company that engaged in boycott of Israel unless boycott was “founded on a valid business reason” imposed condition on those who contracted with state that implicated contractors’ First Amendment free speech rights. U.S. Const. Amend. 1;  Ga. Code Ann. § 50-5-85.

[6] Constitutional Law ➡ Narrow tailoring requirement; relationship to governmental interest

Statutes that create content-neutral, incidental burden on speech are permissible under First Amendment if statute furthers substantial governmental interest and burden is no greater than necessary to further interest. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

[7] Constitutional Law ➡ Content-Based Regulations or RestrictionsConstitutional Law ➡ Strict or exacting scrutiny; compelling interest test

Content-based laws—those that target speech based on its communicative content—are presumptively unconstitutional under First Amendment and may be justified only if government proves that they are narrowly tailored to serve compelling state interests. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

[8] Constitutional Law ➡ Content-Based Regulations or RestrictionsConstitutional Law ➡ Strict or exacting scrutiny; compelling interest test

Statute defining regulated speech by its function or purpose draws distinction based on its message and, accordingly, is content-based regulation subject to strict scrutiny under First Amendment. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

[9] Constitutional Law ➡ Government Contracts

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d --- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

Georgia statute prohibiting state from entering into contract with individual or company that engaged in boycott of Israel unless boycott was “founded on a valid business reason” was content-based, and thus was subject to strict scrutiny under First Amendment. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

[10] Constitutional Law ⚡ Strict or exacting scrutiny; compelling interest test

Under strict scrutiny standard of review, government must show that content-based restriction on speech serves compelling governmental interest and that any burden on speech be essential and narrowly tailored to further that interest. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

[11] Constitutional Law ⚡ Post-Secondary Institutions

Education ⚡ Powers, duties, and liabilities

Journalist pled plausible First Amendment free speech claim in her § 1983 action against state university officials by alleging that officials prevented her from contracting to speak at university based on Georgia statute prohibiting state from entering into contract with her because she engaged in boycott of Israel that was not “founded on a valid business reason.” U.S. Const. Amend. 1; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983; Ga. Code Ann. § 50-5-85.

[12] Constitutional Law ⚡ Post-Secondary Institutions

Education ⚡ Powers, duties, and liabilities

Journalist pled plausible First Amendment compelled speech claim in her § 1983 action against university officials by alleging that officials required her to sign certification that she was not engaged in boycott of Israel as precondition for entering into contract to give speech at university. U.S. Const. Amend. 1; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983; Ga. Code Ann. § 50-5-85.

[13] Constitutional Law ⚡ Certainty and definiteness; vagueness

Statute is impermissibly vague under Due Process Clause when people of common intelligence are left to guess at its precise meaning or when standard of conduct is not specified. U.S. Const. Amend. 14.

[14] Constitutional Law ⚡ Administration; property, contracts, and liabilities

Education ⚡ Constitutional and statutory provisions

Journalist pled plausible void for vagueness claim under Due Process Clause in her § 1983 action against state university officials by alleging that Georgia prohibited state from entering into contracts with individuals or companies that engaged in boycott of Israel and from “other actions that are intended to limit commercial relations with Israel,” and that she was unsure whether that prohibition extended to public speech advocating boycott of Israel and calling on others to do so. U.S. Const. Amend. 14; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983; Ga. Code Ann. § 50-5-85.

[15] Civil Rights ⚡ Good faith and reasonableness; knowledge and clarity of law; motive and intent, in general

Qualified immunity offers complete protection for individual public officials performing discretionary functions insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which reasonable person would have known.

[16] Public Employment ⚡ Privilege or immunity in general

Once public official claiming qualified immunity has established that she was performing discretionary function, burden then shifts to plaintiff to show that qualified immunity should not apply.

[17] Civil Rights ⚡ Government Agencies and Officers

Civil Rights ⚡ Good faith and reasonableness; knowledge and clarity of law; motive and intent, in general

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d ---- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

Plaintiff demonstrates that qualified immunity does not apply by showing: (1) defendant violated constitutional right, and (2) right was clearly established at time of alleged violation.

[18] Civil Rights — Good faith and reasonableness; knowledge and clarity of law; motive and intent, in general

Constitutional right is clearly established, for qualified immunity purposes, only if its contours are sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand what he is doing violates that right.

[19] Civil Rights — Good faith and reasonableness; knowledge and clarity of law; motive and intent, in general

When court considers whether law clearly established relevant conduct as constitutional violation at time that government official engaged in challenged acts, for qualified immunity purposes, court looks for fair warning to officers that conduct at issue violated constitutional right.

[20] Civil Rights — Good faith and reasonableness; knowledge and clarity of law; motive and intent, in general

To overcome qualified immunity defense, plaintiff must show that government official had fair warning, either by (1) showing materially similar case has already been decided, (2) pointing to broader, clearly established principle that should control novel facts of situation, or (3) demonstrating that conduct involved in case so obviously violate Constitution that prior case law is unnecessary.

[21] Civil Rights — Schools

It was not clearly established in September 2019 that state statutes prohibiting states from contracting with individuals and companies that were engaged in boycott of Israel violated contractors' First Amendment rights, and thus state university officials who rescinded journalist's contract to speak at conference based on her refusal to certify that she was not engaged in such boycott were entitled to qualified immunity from liability in journalist's § 1983 action; over 30 laws had been enacted to restrict state contractors' ability to support boycotts of Israel, there were no precedential decisions on matter in circuit, and there was disagreement among courts that had considered matter. U.S. Const. Amend. 1; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983; Ga. Code Ann. § 50-5-85.

[22] Civil Rights — Good faith and reasonableness; knowledge and clarity of law; motive and intent, in general

For qualified immunity purposes, “clearly established law” should not be defined at high level of generality, but must be particularized to facts of case.

West Codenotes

Validity Called into Doubt

Ga. Code Ann. § 50-5-85

Attorneys and Law Firms

Edward Terkeel Mitchell, III, Murtaza Waqas Khwaja, Georgia Chapter of the Council on American Islamic Relations, Atlanta, GA, Gadeir I. Abbas, Pro Hac Vice, Justin Sadowsky, Pro Hac Vice, Lena F. Masri, Pro Hac Vice, Cair Legal Defense Fund, Mara E. Verheyden-Hilliard, Partnership for Civil Justice Fund, Washington, DC, for Plaintiff.

Deborah Nolan Gore, State of Georgia, Atlanta, GA, for Defendants Steve Wrigley, Kyle Marrero.

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d ---- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

ORDER

MARK H. COHEN, United States District Judge

*1 This case comes before the Court on Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint ("Mot. to Dismiss") [Doc. 37].

I. BACKGROUND¹

Plaintiff Abby Martin ("Martin") is a journalist who frequently expresses views in support of the rights of Palestinians and the Boycott, Divestment, Sanctions ("BDS") movement, which supports a political and economic boycott of Israel based on actions taken by the Israeli government with respect to its occupation of Palestinian territory. First Am. Compl. ("Am. Compl.") [Doc. 26] ¶¶ 4, 21. On July 19, 2019, Georgia Southern University ("GSU") invited Martin to speak at the 2020 International Critical Media Literary Conference (the "Conference"), which was to be hosted by GSU. Id. ¶ 5. Martin accepted the invitation. Id. One week later, a professor at GSU and conference co-chair emailed several professors at other academic institutions to inform them that Martin had been selected as the keynote speaker for the Conference. Id. ¶ 40. In that email, the professor referred to Martin as a "fantastic Key Note," and planning for the Conference continued. Id. ¶¶ 40-41.

On September 11, 2019, Defendants Overstreet, Blitch, and Lensch, on behalf of Defendants Wrigley and Marrero, sent Martin an agreement for her engagement as an independent contractor to provide her keynote presentation in exchange for a $1,000 honorarium as well as costs of travel and lodging. Id. ¶¶ 5, 42. On September 18, 2019, Defendants Overstreet, Blitch, and Lensch wrote Martin again to "draw [her] attention [to] legal language that the University and State of Georgia require us to include" and to state that her invitation would be honored only "[i]f this language is acceptable." Id. ¶¶ 43-44. The language referenced in the agreement was the following clause: "You certify that you are not currently engaged in, and agree for the duration of this agreement not to engage in, a boycott of Israel, as defined in  O.C.G.A. Section 50-5-85." Id. ¶¶ 5, 43. This certification was required pursuant to Georgia Senate Bill 327, codified as  O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85, which became effective on May 9, 2017. Id. ¶¶ 3, 43, 49-50.  O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

The state shall not enter into a contract with an individual or company if the contract is related to construction or the provision of services, supplies, or information technology unless the contract includes a written certification that such individual or company is not currently engaged in, and agrees for the duration of the contract not to engage in, a boycott of Israel.

 O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85(b). The law defines "Boycott of Israel" to mean engaging in refusals to deal with, terminating business activities with, or other actions that are intended to limit commercial relations with Israel or individuals or companies doing business in Israel or in Israeli-controlled territories, when such actions are taken:

*2 (A) In compliance or adherence to calls for a boycott of Israel other than those boycotts to which 50 U.S.C. App. Section 2407(c), as it existed on January 1, 2016, applies; or

(B) In a manner that discriminates on the basis of nationality, national origin, religion, or other unreasonable basis that is not founded on a valid business reason.

 O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85(a).

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d --- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

Martin responded the same day, stating: “I’m sure you know, a lot of my work advocates the boycott of Israel, and my new film features that call to action. I cannot sign any form promising not to boycott Israel.” Id. ¶¶ 5, 45. As a result, Defendants prevented Martin from speaking at the Conference and receiving the $1,000 honorarium, and subsequently cancelled the Conference. Id. ¶¶ 6-7, 50, 52. As a result, Martin was deprived of her ability to speak on the GSU campus, to receive the honorarium, and to showcase her work. Id. ¶¶ 53-55. Martin, a frequent public speaker, alleges that she is likely to be prevented from speaking on other college campuses overseen by Wrigley. Id. ¶ 56.

On July 28, 2020, Martin filed her First Amended Complaint in the above-styled action alleging that  O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 violates the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution by impermissibly infringing on Martin’s guaranteed rights to freedom of speech, freedom of association, and due process. Am. Compl. ¶¶ 57-95. Martin seeks, inter alia, an injunction against the continuing enforcement of the statute, a declaration that the statute is unconstitutional, and damages against Defendants Overstreet, Blitch, and Lensch in their individual capacities. Id., Prayer for Relief.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2) requires that a pleading contain a “short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), a claim will be dismissed for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted if it does not plead “enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.”  Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 167 L.Ed.2d 929 (2007). The Supreme Court has explained this standard as follows:

A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. The plausibility standard is not akin to a “probability requirement,” but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.

 Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 173 L.Ed.2d 868 (2009) (internal citation omitted). Thus, a claim will survive a motion to dismiss only if the factual allegations in the pleading are “enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level.”  Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955.

At the motion to dismiss stage, the court accepts all well-pleaded facts in the plaintiff’s complaint as true, as well as all reasonable inferences drawn from those facts.  McGinley v. Houston, 361 F.3d 1328, 1330 (11th Cir. 2004); Lotierzo v. Woman’s World Med. Ctr., Inc., 278 F.3d 1180, 1182 (11th Cir. 2002). Not only must the court accept the well-pleaded allegations as true, but these allegations must also be construed in the light most favorable to the pleader.  Powell v. Thomas, 643 F.3d 1300, 1302 (11th Cir. 2011). However, the court need not accept legal conclusions, nor must it accept as true legal conclusions couched as factual allegations.  Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678, 129 S.Ct. 1937. Thus, evaluation of a motion to dismiss requires the court to assume the veracity of well-pleaded factual allegations and “determine whether they plausibly give rise to an entitlement to relief.”  Id. at 679, 129 S.Ct. 1937.

III. DISCUSSION

*3 ^[1] ^[2] “It is well established that [ 42 U.S.C. §] 1983 itself creates no substantive rights; it merely provides a remedy for deprivations of federal rights established elsewhere.”  Wideman v. Shallowford Cmty. Hosp., Inc., 826 F.2d 1030, 1032 (11th Cir. 1987) (citing  City of Okla. City v. Tuttle, 471 U.S. 808, 816, 105 S.Ct. 2427, 85 L.Ed.2d 791 (1985)). To sustain a cause of action based on  section 1983, a litigant must establish two elements: (1) that she suffered a deprivation of a right, privilege, or immunity protected by the U.S. Constitution or federal law, and (2) that the act or omission causing the deprivation was committed by a person acting under color of state law. Livadas v. Bradshaw, 512 U.S. 107, 132, 114 S.Ct. 2068, 129 L.Ed.2d 93 (1994); Arrington v. Cobb Cnty., 139 F.3d 865, 872 (11th Cir. 1998). “[S]ection 1983 imposes liability only ‘for violations of rights protected by the Constitution, not for violations of duties of care arising out of tort law.’ ” Wideman, 826 F.2d at 1032 (quoting Baker v. McCollan, 443 U.S. 137, 146, 99 S.Ct. 2689, 61 L.Ed.2d 433 (1979)). Accordingly, “[i]n any § 1983 action, a court must determine ‘whether the Plaintiff has been deprived of a right secured by the Constitution and laws of the United States.’ ” Glenn v. Brumby, 663 F.3d 1312, 1315 (11th Cir. 2011) (quoting Baker, 443 U.S. at 146, 99 S.Ct. 2689). “Absent the existence of an underlying constitutional right, no section 1983 claim will lie.” Wide-man, 826 F.2d at 1032.

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d ---- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

Martin asserts two causes of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, claiming that Defendants’ enforcement of O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 violates her First and Fourteenth Amendment rights to freedom of speech and assembly (Count One) and her Fourteenth Amendment right to due process (Count Two). Am. Compl. ¶¶ 57-95. Defendants contend that O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 is constitutional, so that Martin’s claims fail as a matter of law. Mot. to Dismiss.

A. Martin’s Complaint States a Claim Upon Which Relief Can Be Granted That O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 Violates Martin’s First and Fourteenth Amendment Rights to Freedom of Speech and Assembly.

1. Martin’s Advocacy of a Boycott of Israel Constitutes Protected Activity Under the First Amendment.

The First Amendment provides that “Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech, ... or the right of the people peaceably to assemble” U.S. Const. amend. I. The First Amendment applies to the states through the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Schneider v. State of New Jersey, 308 U.S. 147, 160, 60 S.Ct. 146, 84 L.Ed. 155 (1939).

^[3] The Supreme Court has held that state government employment cannot be conditioned “on taking oaths that impinge on rights guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments[.]” Cole v. Richardson, 405 U.S. 676, 680, 92 S.Ct. 1332, 31 L.Ed.2d 593 (1972). This same principle also applies to those contracting with the government, absent a special government interest. Bd. of Cnty. Comm’rs, Wabaunsee Cnty. v. Umbehr, 518 U.S. 668, 677-78, 116 S.Ct. 2342, 135 L.Ed.2d 843 (1996). The Supreme Court also has “long held ... that nonverbal expressive activity can be banned because of the action it entails, but not because of the ideas it expresses—so that burning a flag in violation of an ordinance against outdoor fires could be punishable, whereas burning a flag in violation of an ordinance against dishonoring the flag is not.” R.A.V. v. City of St. Paul, Minn., 505 U.S. 377, 385, 112 S.Ct. 2538, 120 L.Ed.2d 305 (1992).

Defendants assert that this case is controlled by the Supreme Court’s holding in Rumsfeld v. Forum for Acad. & Institutional Rights, Inc. \(“FAIR”\), 547 U.S. 47, 126 S.Ct. 1297, 164 L.Ed.2d 156 (2006). Br. in Supp. of Defs.’ Mot. to Dismiss (“Defs.’ Br.”) [Doc. 37-1] at 5-9, 15-21. In FAIR, the Supreme Court addressed the constitutionality of the Solomon Amendment, which required universities receiving federal funding to grant military recruiters the same access to college campuses as provided to other recruiters. FAIR, 547 U.S. at 51, 126 S.Ct. 1297. A coalition of law schools and faculty members seeking to bar military recruiters’ access to their campuses in protest of the military’s discrimination based on sexual orientation filed a lawsuit claiming that the Solomon Amendment violated the First Amendment. Id. at 52, 126 S.Ct. 1297. The Supreme Court held that “[a]s a general matter, the Solomon Amendment regulates conduct, not speech. It affects what law schools must do—afford equal access to military recruiters—not what they may or may not say.” Id. at 60, 126 S.Ct. 1297. In particular, the Supreme Court noted that law schools were only compelled to provide minimal accommodations to military recruiters which were non-monetary and equal to the accommodations extended to all employment recruiters on campus. Id. at 61 n.4, 126 S.Ct. 1297. Defendants also rely upon Int'l Longshoremen's Ass'n v. Allied Int'l, Inc., 456 U.S. 212, 226-27, 102 S.Ct. 1656, 72 L.Ed.2d 21 (1982), which held that “secondary picketing by labor unions” in violation of the National Labor Relations Act is not protected activity under the First Amendment. Defs.’ Br. at 17-18.

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d ---- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

*4 ^[4] Martin asserts that the controlling Supreme Court precedent that determines the unconstitutionality of O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 under the First Amendment is NAACP v. Claiborne Hardware Co., 458 U.S. 886, 102 S.Ct. 3409, 73 L.Ed.2d 1215 (1982). Br. in Opp’n of Defs.’ Mot. to Dismiss (“Pl.’s Br.”) [Doc. 43] at 6. In Claiborne, a Mississippi branch of the NAACP launched a boycott of white merchants in support of demands for racial equality and integration. Claiborne, 458 U.S. at 889, 899-900, 102 S.Ct. 3409. Actions taken in support of the boycott included nonviolent activities such as marches and picketing as well as violent enforcement against boycott violators which allegedly included damage to property and even physical assault. Id. at 902-05, 102 S.Ct. 3409. The Supreme Court held that “the nonviolent elements of [boycotters]’ activities are entitled to protection of the First Amendment.” Id. at 915, 102 S.Ct. 3409. The opinion did not address whether this protection extended to “a narrowly tailored statute designed to prohibit certain forms of anticompetitive conduct or certain types of secondary pressure.” Id. at 915, n.49, 102 S.Ct. 3409. However, “[t]he right of the States to regulate economic activity could not justify a complete prohibition against a nonviolent, politically motivated boycott designed to force governmental change and effectuate rights guaranteed by the Constitution itself.” Id. at 914, 102 S.Ct. 3409.

Defendants’ argument that FAIR and Int'l Longshoremen rather than Claiborne govern as to whether O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 infringes on Martin’s First Amendment rights fails. FAIR is distinguishable because the Solomon Amendment, in contrast to O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85, was aimed at changing the “result achieved” by the law schools’ recruiting policy rather than the content of such policies. FAIR, 547 U.S. at 57, 126 S.Ct. 1297. O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85, on the other hand, focuses exclusively on the motive behind an individual’s refusal to deal with Israel rather than the result achieved by any boycott. See O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) (allowing contractors to refuse to deal with or terminate business activities with Israel as long as their action is “founded on a valid business reason.”). Because O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 allows or prohibits the same conduct depending solely on the motive behind it, it is the content of behavior rather than the result that this statute purports to regulate. Int'l Longshoremen also is distinguishable because the Supreme Court’s holding in that case was limited to secondary picketing and boycotts in the labor union context which threatened to infringe upon the rights of others. Int'l Longshoremen, 456 U.S. at 226-27, 102 S.Ct. 1656.

In fact, Defendants’ argument has been rejected in other cases addressing state statutes similar to O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85, where it has been held that the type of restriction imposed upon Martin involves protected expression under the First Amendment. In Jordahl v. Brnovich, 336 F. Supp. 3d 1016 (D. Ariz. 2018), vacated and remanded, 789 F. App’x 589 (9th Cir. 2020),³ the district court considered the Arizona statute which prohibited public entities from contracting with companies that engage in boycotts of Israel. The district court in Jordahl rejected the defendants’ reliance on FAIR and Int'l Longshoremen and instead relied upon Claiborne to hold that the conduct evidenced by the boycotting of consumer goods and services offered by businesses that support Israel’s occupation of Palestinian territories is deserving of First Amendment protection:

In accordance with Claiborne, these types of boycotting activities, which clearly include “the practice of persons sharing common views banding together to achieve a common end,” are entitled constitutional protections. 458 U.S. at 907, 102 S.Ct. 3409. The Act here specifically and generally enumerates certain activity companies cannot engage in if they wish to contract with a public entity. Specifically, the Act prohibits companies from “engaging in a refusal to deal,” “terminating business activities” or “performing other actions that are intended to limit commercial relations.” A.R.S. § 35-393\(1\) (emphasis added). These actions, however, are only prohibited when taken “in compliance with or adherence to calls for a boycott of Israel.” Id. The language of the Act thus necessarily contemplates prohibiting collective conduct aimed “to achieve a common end”; here, a “boycott of Israel.”  458 U.S. at 907-08, 102 S.Ct. 3409.

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d --- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

*5 ***

A restriction of one's ability to participate in collective calls to oppose Israel unquestionably burdens the protected expression of companies wishing to engage in such a boycott. The type of collective action targeted by the Act specifically implicates the rights of assembly and association that Americans and Arizonans use “to bring about political, social, and economic change.”  Claiborne, 458 U.S. at 911, 102 S.Ct. 3409 (stating “[t]he established elements of speech, assembly, association, and petition, though not identical, are inseparable”) (internal quotation omitted) Under  Claiborne, this conduct is deserving of First Amendment protection. Plaintiffs claim is therefore not foreclosed by  Int'l Longshoremen.

 Id. at 1042-43 (parallel citations omitted).

In  Amawi v. Pflugerville Indep. Sch. Dist., 373 F. Supp. 3d 717 (W.D. Tex. 2019), vacated and remanded sub nom. Amawi v. Paxton, 956 F.3d 816 (5th Cir. 2020),⁴ Texas enacted an “anti-BDS” statute to prohibit the boycotting of Israel as a condition of public employment. The district court in  Amawi concluded that the boycotts against Israel were inherently expressive conduct and protected speech:

 Claiborne, not  FAIR, governs this case. Texas does not dispute that Plaintiffs’ boycotts are political; they support the BDS movement’s “dispute with the Israeli government’s policies.” (Texas Resp. Mots. Dismiss, Dkt. 25, at 18).  Claiborne deals with political boycotts;  FAIR, in contrast, is not about boycotts at all. The Supreme Court did not treat the  FAIR plaintiffs’ conduct as a boycott: the word “boycott” appears nowhere in the opinion, the decision to withhold patronage is not implicated, and  Claiborne, the key decision recognizing that the First Amendment protects political boycotts, is not discussed.

The statute defines “boycott Israel” according to the expressive purpose behind the refusal to buy things. See Tex. Gov. Code § 808.001 (“boycott Israel” defined to mean “refusing to deal with, terminating business activities with, or otherwise taking any action that is intended to penalize, inflict harm on, or limit commercial relations specifically with Israel, or with a person or entity doing business in Israel or in an Israeli-controlled territory”). And it expressly exempts refusing to contract with Israel “for ordinary business purposes.” Id. Accordingly, H.B. 89’s no-boycott provision applies by its express terms only to expressive conduct.

 Id. at 743-45.

 Koontz v. Watson, 283 F. Supp. 3d 1007 (D. Kan. 2018), reviewed Kansas’s law requiring all persons who contract with the state to certify that they are not engaged in a boycott of Israel. In granting a preliminary injunction, the district court again relied on  Claiborne and distinguished  FAIR:

*6 The conduct prohibited by the Kansas Law is protected for the same reason as the boycotters’ conduct in  Claiborne was protected.

The Kansas Law here is different than the requirement at issue in  FAIR. The conduct the Kansas Law aims to regulate is inherently expressive. See  Claiborne, 458 U.S. at 907-08 [102 S.Ct. 3409]. It is easy enough to associate plaintiff’s conduct with the message that the boycotters believe Israel should improve its treatment of Palestinians. And boycotts—like parades—have an expressive quality.  Id. Forcing plaintiff to disown her boycott is akin to forcing plaintiff to accommodate Kansas's message of support for Israel. Because the Kansas Law regulates inherently expressive conduct and forces plaintiff to accommodate Kansas's message, it is unlike the law at issue in [ FAIR].

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d --- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

 Id. at 1022, 1024 (parallel citation omitted).

Defendants contend that these cases were wrongly decided and instead rely upon  Ark. Times LP v. Waldrip, 362 F. Supp. 3d 617 (E.D. Ark. 2019), as a correct application of  FAIR rather than  Claiborne to “a very similar state law which likewise prohibits state entities from contracting with companies that boycott Israel.” Defs.’ Br. at 18-19. Defendants’ position has been undermined by the recent reversal of the  Waldrip district court’s decision by the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit,  Ark. Times LP v. Waldrip, 988 F.3d 453 (8th Cir. 2021), which contains the following pertinent discussion:

The State says this case is indistinguishable from  FAIR because a decision not to purchase Israeli goods, like the decision to bar military recruiters from campus, is “all but invisible absent explanatory speech.” According to the State, “a boycott of Israel is [simply] not expressive conduct,” and as such is not entitled to First Amendment protection. But the comparison is not an exact fit because  FAIR did not concern a boycott. In  FAIR, the Supreme Court addressed the Solomon Amendment, which gave universities “a choice: Either allow military recruiters the same access to students afforded any other recruiter or forgo certain federal funds.” The Court thus focused narrowly on the law schools’ conduct in relation to military recruiters and never characterized it more broadly as a “boycott.” Here, we are faced with a statute that expressly concerns and prohibits “boycotts.”

 Id. at 462. Like  O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85, the Arkansas statute defined “boycott of Israel” to include “other actions that are intended to limit commercial relations with Israel, or persons or entities doing business in Israel or in Israeli-controlled territories.”  Id. at 464 (quoting Ark. Code Ann. § 25-1-502(a)(A)(i)).

Considering the Act as a whole, we conclude that the term “other actions” in the definition of “boycott Israel” and “boycott of Israel” encompasses more than “commercial conduct” similar to refusing to deal or terminating business activities. Instead, the Act requires government contractors, as a condition of contracting with Arkansas, not to engage in economic refusals to deal with Israel and to limit their support and promotion of boycotts of Israel. As such, the Act restricts government contractors’ ability to participate in speech and other protected, boycott-associated activities recognized by the Supreme Court in  Claiborne. See  458 U.S. at 915, 102 S.Ct. 3409. Therefore, the Act imposes a condition on government contractors that implicates their First Amendment rights.

*7  Id. at 466-67 (footnote and parallel citation omitted).

^[5] Like the decisions reviewing anti-boycotting statutes in  Jordahl,  Amawi,  Koontz, and  Waldrip, this Court concludes that  O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 imposes a condition on those who contract with the state of Georgia that implicates the contractors’ First Amendment rights.

2. O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 Burdens Martin’s Speech and Is Not Narrowly Tailored to Further a Substantial State Interest.

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d ---- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

[6] [7] [8] Statutes which create a content-neutral, incidental burden on speech are permissible if the statute furthers a substantial governmental interest and the burden is no greater than necessary to further the interest. See United States v. O'Brien, 391 U.S. 367, 376-77, 88 S.Ct. 1673, 20 L.Ed.2d 672 (1968). In contrast, “[c]ontent-based laws—those that target speech based on its communicative content—are presumptively unconstitutional and may be justified only if the government proves that they are narrowly tailored to serve compelling state interests.” Reed v. Town of Gilbert, Ariz., 576 U.S. 155, 163, 135 S.Ct. 2218, 192 L.Ed.2d 236 (2015) (citations omitted); see also Simon & Schuster, Inc. v. Members of N.Y. State Crime Victims Bd., 502 U.S. 105, 115, 112 S.Ct. 501, 116 L.Ed.2d 476 (1991) (“A statute is presumptively inconsistent with the First Amendment if it imposes a financial burden on speakers because of the content of their speech.”). A statute defining regulated speech by its function purpose draws a distinction based on its message and, accordingly, is a content-based regulation subject to strict scrutiny. Reed, 576 U.S. at 164, 135 S.Ct. 2218.

Defendants contend that any burden imposed upon speech by O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 is neutral and incidental. Defs.’ Br. at 21-22. In addition, Defendants assert that O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 “promotes a substantial state interest—namely, Georgia’s interest in helping advance a long-standing federal foreign policy goal.” Id. at 23-24. In response, Martin contends that O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 burdens speech and the state’s purported interest is nothing more than a mechanism for stifling expression. Pl.’s Br. at 13-16.

[9] O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 is content-based because the statute exempts boycotts of Israel that are “founded on a valid business reason.” O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85\(a\)\(1\)\(B\). Therefore, whether the state of Georgia will enter into an agreement with a contractor that refuses to engage in business with Israel is premised entirely upon the motive behind the contractor’s decision.

[10] [11] Because the burden on speech imposed by O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 is content-based, it is subject to strict scrutiny. Reed, 576 U.S. at 164, 171, 135 S.Ct. 2218. This means that the government must show that the statute serves a compelling governmental interest and that any burden on speech be essential and narrowly tailored to further that interest. Id. at 171, 135 S.Ct. 2218 (citing Ariz. Free Enter. Club’s Freedom Club PAC v. Bennett, 564 U.S. 721, 734, 131 S.Ct. 2806, 180 L.Ed.2d 664 (2011)). Even assuming that Georgia’s interest in furthering foreign policy goals regarding relations with Israel is a substantial state interest, Defendants fail to explain how Martin’s advocacy of a boycott of Israel has any bearing on Georgia’s ability to advance foreign policy goals with Israel. The law also is not narrowly tailored to achieve the state’s purported interest for the same reasons that Kansas’s law was enjoined:

*8 But even if one assumed that Kansas had passed the law to achieve constitutionally permissible goals that would not change the outcome here. It is still unconstitutional because it is not narrowly tailored to achieve those permissive goals. If Kansas had passed its law to regulate boycotts intended to suppress economic competition coming from Israel—a goal that Claiborne permits—the Kansas Law is overinclusive. It is overinclusive because it also bans political boycotts, which is impermissible. See Garrison v. Louisiana, 379 U.S. 64, 74-75, 85 S.Ct. 209, 13 L.Ed.2d 125 (1964) (“[S]peech concerning public affairs is more than selfexpression; it is the essence of self-government.”). Likewise, if the Kansas Law’s goal is to promote trade relations with Israel—also a permissible goal—the Kansas Law is underinclusive because it only regulates boycotts but does not regulate other conduct that affects trade.

Koontz, 283 F. Supp. 3d at 1023 (parallel citation omitted).

The Court notes that, even if it were to apply intermediate scrutiny pursuant to O’Brien, as Defendants would have this Court do, the factors still weigh in favor of Martin. See Defs.’ Br. at 21 (citing O’Brien, 391 U.S. at 377, 88 S.Ct. 1673). “[The Supreme] Court has held that when ‘speech’ and ‘nonspeech’ elements are combined in the same course of conduct, a sufficiently important governmental interest in regulating the nonspeech element can justify incidental limitations on First

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d ---- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

Amendment freedoms.” O'Brien, 391 U.S. at 376, 88 S.Ct. 1673. In such a case, the Constitution requires that “the incidental restriction on alleged First Amendment freedoms is no greater than is essential to the furtherance of that interest” and that “the governmental interest is unrelated to the suppression of free expression.” Id. at 377, 88 S.Ct. 1673.

However, the Supreme Court also has held that a facially speech-neutral statute may still encroach upon activity protected by the First Amendment. United States v. Nat'l Treasury Emps. Union, 513 U.S. 454, 469-70, 115 S.Ct. 1003, 130 L.Ed.2d 964 (1995). In Nat'l Treasury, the Supreme Court held that even though a statute was content-neutral, the indirect burden of banning honoraria given to government employees for public speaking or publication would “chill[] potential speech before it happens” and disincentivize government employees from public expression. Nat'l Treasury, 513 U.S. at 468-71, 115 S.Ct. 1003. Here, O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 has a similar chilling effect because, as alleged in the First Amended Complaint, the statute effectively bans Martin from speaking at GSU and presumably other state university campuses. Moreover, O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 arguably is more offensive to the First Amendment than the statute in Nat'l Treasury because it burdens speech exclusively for those who hold particular political beliefs. Accordingly, even under Defendants’ proposed intermediate scrutiny test, O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 places an unconstitutional incidental burden on speech.

Because O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 prohibits inherently expressive conduct protected by the First Amendment, burdens Martin's right to free speech, and is not narrowly tailored to further a substantial state interest, Defendant's Motion to Dismiss Count One of the First Amended Complaint is DENIED.

3. The Statute Unconstitutionally Compels Speech.

^[12] The requirement contained in O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 that parties seeking to contract with the state of Georgia sign a certification that they are not engaged in a boycott of Israel also is unconstitutional compelled speech. “[W]hen a State attempts to make inquiries about a person's beliefs or associations, its power is limited by the First Amendment. Broad and sweeping state inquiries into these protected areas ... discourage citizens from exercising rights protected by the Constitution.” Baird v. State Bar of Ariz., 401 U.S. 1, 6, 91 S.Ct. 702, 27 L.Ed.2d 639 (1971). “Similarly, the State may not condition employment ‘on an oath denying past, or abjuring future,’ protected speech and associational activities.” Amawi, 373 F. Supp. 3d at 754 (quoting Cole, 405 U.S. at 680, 92 S.Ct. 1332).

*9 Because O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 discriminates based on the motive for engaging in a boycott against Israel, the certification requirement forces parties contracting with the state of Georgia to publicly assign a motive and speech element to what Defendants deem merely economic conduct. The certification that one is not engaged in a boycott of Israel is no different than requiring a person to espouse certain political beliefs or to engage in certain political associations. The Supreme Court has found similar requirements to be unconstitutional on their face. See, e.g., Baird, 401 U.S. at 5-6, 91 S.Ct. 702 (holding unconstitutional a state bar question requiring applicants to state whether they had ever been a member of the Communist Party or another organization which advocated the overthrow of the United States Government by force).

B. Martin States a Claim Upon Which Relief Can Be Granted That O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 Violates Martin's Right to Due Process Under the Fourteenth Amendment.

^[13] In cases arising under the First Amendment, courts “are concerned with the vagueness of a statute ‘on its face’ because such vagueness may in itself deter constitutionally protected and socially desirable conduct.” United States v. Nat'l Dairy Prods. Corp., 372 U.S. 29, 36, 83 S.Ct. 594, 9 L.Ed.2d 561 (1963); see also Amawi, 373 F. Supp. 3d at 756 (quoting Smith v. Goguen, 415 U.S. 566, 573, 94 S.Ct. 1242, 39 L.Ed.2d 605 (1974)) (“When dealing with a statute ‘capable of reaching expression sheltered by the First Amendment, the [vagueness] doctrine demands a greater degree of specificity than in other contexts.’ ”). A statute is impermissibly vague when people of common intelligence are left to guess at its precise meaning or when the standard of conduct is not specified. Coates v. City of Cincinnati, 402 U.S. 611, 614, 91 S.Ct. 1686, 29 L.Ed.2d 214 (1971).

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d ---- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

[14] Here, O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85’s inclusion of “other actions that are intended to limit commercial relations with Israel” makes the statute impermissibly vague. O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85. This phrase in particular may leave a reasonable individual to speculate as to what conduct is prohibited. See Waldrip, 988 F.3d at 466 (“a contractor could readily conclude that it was prohibited from both refusing to economically engage with Israel and supporting or promoting a boycott of Israel or Israeli-goods. A contractor that does not want to risk violating the terms of its contract would likely refrain even from activity that is constitutionally protected.”). Despite Defendants’ contentions to the contrary, the language in O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 makes it questionable whether Martin even would be permitted to speak publicly in support of BDS Boycotts while she was engaged in any contract with the state of Georgia. Public speech which advocates for a boycott of Israel and calls on others to engage in BDS Boycotts could reasonably be interpreted as “actions that are intended to limit commercial relations with Israel.” O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85-85(a). Thus, Martin has sufficiently stated a claim that O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 is void for vagueness in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment.

C. Defendants Overstreet, Blitch, and Lensch Are Shielded From Liability for Damages in Their Individual Capacities Based Upon Qualified Immunity.

Defendants also contend that, even if Martin has stated a claim under § 1983, Defendants Overstreet, Blitch, and Lensch (collectively, the “Individual Defendants”) are entitled to qualified immunity from suit in their individual capacities because the alleged constitutional right was not clearly established. Defs.’ Br. at 33-35. Martin contends that the Individual Defendants are not entitled to qualified immunity because Claiborne clearly establishes the constitutional violation in this case. Pl.’s Br. at 30.

[15] “Qualified immunity offers complete protection for individual public officials performing discretionary functions ‘insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known.’ ” Sherrod v. Johnson, 667 F.3d 1359, 1363 (11th Cir. 2012) (quoting Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818, 102 S.Ct. 2727, 73 L.Ed.2d 396 (1982)). To claim qualified immunity, a defendant must first show he was performing a discretionary function. Barnes v. Zaccari, 669 F.3d 1295, 1303 (11th Cir. 2012). There is no dispute that the Individual Defendants were acting in the scope of their discretionary authority in this case.⁵

*10 [16] [17] [18] [19] [20] “Once discretionary authority is established, the burden then shifts to the plaintiff to show that qualified immunity should not apply.” Edwards v. Shanley, 666 F.3d 1289, 1294 (11th Cir. 2012) (quoting Lewis v. City of W. Palm Beach, Fla., 561 F.3d 1288, 1291 (11th Cir. 2009)). A plaintiff demonstrates that qualified immunity does not apply by showing: “(1) the defendant violated a constitutional right, and (2) the right was clearly established at the time of the alleged violation.” Holloman ex rel. Holloman v. Harland, 370 F.3d 1252, 1254 (11th Cir. 2004). A constitutional right is clearly established “only if its contours are ‘sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand what he is doing violates that right.’ ” Vaughan v. Cox, 343 F.3d 1323, 1332 (11th Cir. 2003) (quoting Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 640, 107 S.Ct. 3034, 97 L.Ed.2d 523 (1987)). “When we consider whether the law clearly established the relevant conduct as a constitutional violation at the time that [the government official] engaged in the challenged acts, we look for ‘fair warning’ to officers that the conduct at issue violated a constitutional right.” Jones v. Fransen, 857 F.3d 843, 851 (11th Cir. 2017) (citing

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d ---- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

Coffin v. Brandau, 642 F.3d 999, 1013 (11th Cir. 2011) (en banc)). There are three methods to show that the government official had fair warning:

First, the plaintiffs may show that a materially similar case has already been decided. Second, the plaintiffs can point to a broader, clearly established principle that should control the novel facts of the situation. Finally, the conduct involved in the case may so obviously violate the constitution that prior case law is unnecessary. Under controlling law, the plaintiffs must carry their burden by looking to the law as interpreted at the time by the United States Supreme Court, the Eleventh Circuit, or the [relevant State Supreme Court].

 Terrell v. Smith, 668 F.3d 1244, 1255-56 (11th Cir. 2012) (citations, quotation marks, and alterations omitted). The second and third methods, known as “obvious clarity” cases, exist when “case law is not needed” to demonstrate the unlawfulness of the conduct or where the existing case law is so obvious that “every reasonable government official facing the circumstances would know that the official's conduct did violate federal law when the official acted.”   Vinyard v. Wilson, 311 F.3d 1340, 1350-51 (11th Cir. 2002). Such cases are rare. See, e.g.,   Santamorena v. Georgia Military College, 147 F.3d 1337, 1340 n.6 (11th Cir. 1998) (noting that “these exceptional cases rarely arise”).

^[21] The law at issue in this case is similar to over thirty laws that have been enacted to restrict the ability of state contractors to support boycotts of Israel. See <https://www.jewishvirtuallibrary.org/anti-bds-legislation> (last visited May 21, 2021). Although there have been district court and courts of appeals decisions that have considered the constitutionality of these laws discussed by the Court in this Order, none of them came from the Supreme Court, the Eleventh Circuit, or the Supreme Court of Georgia. Martin contends that  Claiborne established the broad principle which controls the analysis of the review of  O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85; however, the analysis undertaken in the cases previously decided involving “anti-BDS” laws indicates that determination of whether Georgia's law is unconstitutional is not “clearly established.” Indeed, in the one circuit court of appeals case that has considered the merits of a similar law, there was a disagreement among the panel members as to the correct outcome. See  Waldrip, 988 F.3d at 467 (Kobes, J., dissenting).

^[22] It is unreasonable to expect that the Individual Defendants in this case would have been on notice that  O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85 was unconstitutional based upon the application of  Claiborne to the specific facts of this case. “[C]learly established law should not be defined at a high level of generality. As this Court explained decades ago, the clearly established law must be “particularized” to the facts of the case.”  White v. Pauly, — U.S. —, 137 S. Ct. 548, 552, 196 L.Ed.2d 463 (2017) (citations omitted). And this is not an “obvious clarity” case where case law is not necessary to establish the unlawfulness of Defendants’ actions.

*11 As noted, to establish fair warning under this method, plaintiff may point to prior case law (from the Supreme Court of the United States, the Eleventh Circuit, or the highest court in the relevant state) that is materially similar. This method requires us to consider whether the factual scenario that the official faced is fairly distinguishable from the circumstances facing a government official in a previous case. Although existing case law does not necessarily have to be directly on point, it must be close enough to have put the statutory or constitutional question beyond debate. If reasonable people can differ on the lawfulness of a government official's actions despite existing case law, he did not have fair warning and is entitled to qualified immunity. This court has stated many times that if case law, in factual terms, has not staked out a bright line, qualified immunity almost always protects the defendant.

 Gaines v. Wardynski, 871 F.3d 1203, 1209-10 (11th Cir. 2017) (citations and punctuation omitted). “It is particularly difficult to overcome the qualified immunity defense in the First Amendment context.”  Id. at 1210 (citations omitted).

Martin v. Wrigley, --- F.Supp.3d ---- (2021)

2021 WL 2068261

None of the cases Martin cites in her response are particularized to the facts of this case or are close enough to have put the constitutional question “beyond debate.” Pl.’s Br. at 34-35. Consequently, she has not carried her burden of showing that the Individual Defendants violated a clearly established constitutional right. Accordingly, Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss is GRANTED as to Defendants Overstreet, Blitch, and Lensch in their individual capacities.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, it is hereby ORDERED that Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim [Doc. 37] is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART. Defendants’ Motion is GRANTED with respect to Martin's claims against Overstreet, Blitch, and Lensch in their individual capacities, and those Defendants are DISMISSED. Defendants’ Motion is otherwise DENIED.

IT IS SO ORDERED this 21st day of May, 2021.

All Citations

--- F.Supp.3d ----, 2021 WL 2068261

Footnotes

- ¹ Because this case is before the Court on a motion to dismiss, the facts are presented as alleged in Plaintiff's Complaint. Silberman v. Miami Dade Transit, 927 F.3d 1123, 1128 (11th Cir. 2019) (citation omitted).
- ² Subsequent to Claiborne, the Supreme Court distinguished boycotts for political reasons from those conducted for economic reasons. F.T.C. v. Superior Ct. Trial Laws. Ass'n, 493 U.S. 411, 427, 110 S.Ct. 768, 107 L.Ed.2d 851 (1990). In Trial Laws., the Court distinguished political boycotts such as the one in Claiborne with boycotts seeking to gain an economic advantage for boycott participants. Trial Laws., 493 U.S. at 426, 110 S.Ct. 768. The boycotts prohibited by O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85, in contrast, are political boycotts. See O.C.G.A. § 50-5-85\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) (excluding from the definition of “Boycott of Israel” any refusal to deal “founded on a valid business reason.”). Accordingly, the boycotts at issue here do not fall under the reserved question in Claiborne.
- ³ Jordahl was vacated and remanded after the Arizona legislature revised the statute at issue, which mooted the underlying claims. See Jordahl v. Brnovich, 789 F. App'x 589 (9th Cir. 2020).
- ⁴ Amawi was vacated and remanded after the Texas legislature revised the statute at issue, which mooted the underlying claims. See Amawi v. Paxton, 956 F.3d 816 (5th Cir. 2020).
- ⁵ Martin does not respond to Defendants’ assertion that the Individual Defendants were acting within the scope of their discretionary authority. See Pl.’s Br. at 30-31.

End of Document

© 2021 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.